"President Arroyo does not deny having met with leaders of various political persuasions in the runup to Edsa II. INTERIOR SECRETARY Ronaldo Puno will take charge of the Small Town Lottery (STL) project being bankrolled by the Philippine Charity Sweepstakes Office (PCSO) to replace the illegal numbers game "jueteng," Malacañang said yesterday.

Presidential Chief of Staff Michael Defensor said STL was being suspended temporarily because the PCSO and Palawan Mayor Edward Hagedorn, head of the National Anti-jueteng Task Force, did not advise Puno about SIL's implementation.

"They cannot implement this project without the full cooperation of the local government and the police," Defensor said.

The new role that Malacañang has given Puno, who was allegedly involved in backroom operations during the election campaigns of former Presidents Fidel Ramos and Joseph Estrada and President Macapagal-Arroyo, could be related to administration efforts to raise slush funds and to amend the Constitution, according to two opposition senators.

Having Puno implement STL "is like assigning a fox to guard the chicken coop," Senate Minority Leader Aquilino Pimentel Jr.

"MI ULTIMO ADIOS (My Last Farewell)," the timeless poem written by national hero Jose Rizal while awaiting his execution in 1896, was unveiled Monday night at Fort Santiago's Rizal Shrine in Instramuros-in Czech.

This latest of many versions was penned by self-confessed "shy poet" and now the Czech Republic's Ambassador to the Philippines Jaroslav Lud-

The gesture was in celebration of what historians now consider as the immortal friendship between Rizal and his Czech friend Prof. Ferdinand Blumentritt, then a school principal in the town of Litomerice, in what is now the Czech Republic.

Blumentritt (1853-1913) is credited with, among other things, convincing Rizal to overcome his doubts about publishing "Noli Me Tangere" and "RI Filibusterismo"-two books that would stoke the flames of the Philippine revolt against Spain.

On the eve of his death, Rizal actually wrote two pieces: "Ultimo" and a last letter to Blumentritt, his Czech 'soul mate," Ludva noted.

To mark the bond between the two men-Blumentritt never came to the Philippines but corresponded with Rizal for a long time—the national hero's native town of Calamba, Laguna, and Litomerice were declared "sister cities" in 1974. Litomerice has since built four monuments to Rizal, including a bust in City Hall, while one street in Manila has been named in honor of Blumen-

Finally, Comelec steps into bitter LP dispute

By Jerome Aning

AFTER SHOWING INITIAL HESitation, the Commission on Elections has decided to step into a bitter dispute that has split the 60-year-old Liberal Party into two factions, one supporting the embattled President Macapagal-Arroyo and the other demanding her resignation.

The Comelec yesterday directed Manila Mayor Lito Atienza, Presidential Chief of Staff Michael Defensor and 12 others to comment on a letter by Senate President Franklin Drilon asking the poll body to declare illegal a March 2 meeting during which Arienza and his followers ousted Drilon as party president.

Atienza, LP national chair, was voted party ted to Comelec a list of the "newly elected" president in the place of Drilon while Defensor was elected chair during the meeting, which Drilon denounced as a rump session engineered by Malacañang. Ms Arroyo showed up at the meeting after Atienza and Defensor's election.

The body's four-page directive gave the Atienza faction 10 days to file their comments. The order was signed by Chair Benjamin Abalos Sr. and Commissioners Resurrection Borra, Florentino Tuason Jr. and Romeo Brawner.

In his March 3 petition to the Comelec, Drilon maintained that he was still the lawful LP president and asked the poll body to nullify the election organized by the Atienza wing and stop the leaders of the splinter group from representing themselves as LP officials.

Drilon said the election was illegal and violated partly rules. On Mar. 17, he announced the expulsion of Atienza, Defensor and other LP stalwarts who sided with the mayor.

'Internal matter'

Four days earlier, the Atienza camp submit-national officers as well as minutes of the "LP Leaders' National Assembly."

Abalos had earlier described the LP dispute as an "internal matter" and said that Comelec could not intervene. He added that as far as he was concerned, Drilon was still the legitimate LP president based on the commission's documents.

However, he pointed out that the quarrel should be resolved to facilitate accreditation of official LP candidates and determine which group would be given copies of election returns.

The Liberal Party is a member of Ms Arroyo's coalition but was split after Drilon and other party leaders called for the President's resignation during a July 8 meeting on charges she cheated in the 2004 presidential election. Although Defensor was at the meeting, Atienza was absent and called the decision to withdraw support from Ms Arroyo illegal.

Atienza himself is scheduled to preside over a meeting today of the party's National Executive Council (NECO), which Drilon claims is illegal because only he, as party president, can With Tina G. Santos convene the body.

MEDIA GROUPS HAVE ASKED the Court of Appeals to immediately schedule a hearing on their petition to stop the government from imposing "prior restraint" on their work, even as their lawyers lamented it appeared some CA justices were treating the issue like "a legal hot potato."

The incidents included attempts to secure a search warrant against the Philippine Center for Investigative Journalism, one of the petitioners; Presidential Chief of Staff Michael Defensor's claim that lawsuits were being planned against two media personalities, and the closure of Kodao Production's radio show

Likewise, they cited a March 20 report from the intelligence community linking an Inquirer

Zuce has served his purpose for impeachment, says Zamora;

By Norman Bordadora

MICHELANGELO ZUCE HAD SERVED his purpose as far as the opposition's campaign to impeach President Macapagal-Arroyo was concerned.

San Juan Rep. Ronaldo Zamora yesterday said Zuce had led the opposition to persons who had participated in Ms Arroyo's alleged payoff of local election officials at her Quezon City residence just before the May 2004 polls.

"We never planned to use him (as a witness in the impeachment complaint). If you will remember, he was a witness for the Jueteng' (inquiry in the Senate). What he said led us to other witnesses who were actual participants," Zamora told the INQUIRER.

Zamora had headed the opposition impeachment team in the House of Representatives last year when the was thrown out by the administration's allies.

Zuce, a former Malacañang operative working under presidential political liaison Joey Rufino, had testified in a Senate inquiry into jueteng, the illegal numbers game, that he was present when Ms Arroyo met with election officials at her home and appealed for their help. As soon as she left, Zuce had said, the wife of a suspected jueteng lord distributed P30,000 each to the poll officials. The other day, Zuce resurfaced as a member of the government's antijueteng task force in connection with the implementation of the Small Town Lottery (STL), the legalized form of jueteng.

complaint against President Arroyo announced the 30-year-old Zuce had volunteered his services.

Malacafiang, however, denied any hand in Zuce's return to the govern-

Presidential Chief of Staff Michael Defensor said yesterday Zuce was neither paid nor did the Palace initiate the moves to get him back.

Radio reports yesterday said another jueteng witness, Wilfredo "Boy" Mayor, had also become disgruntled with his handlers.

Like Zuce, Mayor admitted he had regrets about coming out last year and testifying in the Senate jueteng investigation.

But his regrets, he said, were limited to the senators' failure to keep their promise to help him financially.

Unlike Zuce, he said, he would never jump to the government side.

"INCOMPREHENSIBLE" PowerPoint presentation of her "tangled philosophy of life," writes the New York Times of the still news-grabbing Imelda Marcos.

Imelda

and the worst-worst," she said in an interview in her apartment, with its golden up-holstery, its old Masters paintings, its ranks of framed photographs and its buckets of artificial flowers.

In the 20 years since she and her husband, President Perdinand E. Marcos, were driven into exile and disgrace by something called People Power, she has retrofitted her tangled philosophy of life into a truly incomprehensible PowerPoint presentation.

During the interview, she pointed a tiny pistol straight ahead and a red laser dot appeared on a screen in the middle of a heart-shaped face labeled "Happy."

The dot moved sideways to a scowling upside-down heart marked "Sad," and then to a fractured circle called "Pacman," a symbol of aggressive consumption. The story of her life.

"You put it all together," she said hopefully, aiming now at a shape that looked a bit like a flower, "an upright heart, an upside-down heart, and what you get is peace. Peace and freedom."

Her patter was so realistic, it gave the illusion of making sense.

"Beauty is God made real," she said, and,
"The opposite of love is not hate, it is selfishness," and, "The only things we keep are those we give away," and, "Common sense is common to all."

She had run through it so often that it gave her relentless mind a chance to rest, and both she and her listener followed the peregrinations of the red dot half asleep.

"The Seven Pillars to Moral Regeneration-ecological order; human order; economic order; social order; moral order; cosmic order; peace and order."

Plastic jewelry Her mind wandered and she touched her fingers to a very large yellow brooch pinned to what seemed to be a well-worn blue dress. "Plastic," she said.

This remark was met with surprise.

"I don't wear jewels anymore," she announced. "They stole all my jewels. These are recycled garbage that I make into jewels."

Last year, the Presidential Commission on Good Government (PCGG) was set to auction off the Marcos jewelry collection composed of pieces from the world's foremost jewelers like Bulgari, Cartier and Harry Winston, but the former first lady went to court to stop the sale.

Her emeralds and rubies were in other people's hands now, still seeming to exert the magnetic power of wealth that seduced Imelda Marcos and her husband, who died in exile in Hawaii in 1989.

The Inquiara earlier reported that the former first lady might be able to recover some, if not all, of her fabulous jewelry if the PCGG would push through with a plan to strike a compromise with her.

PCGG Commissioner Ricardo Abcede said that an out-of-court settlement on the jewelry, estimated to be worth $20 million, would be a good start in the government's attempt to fast-track the recovery of the Marcoses' ill-gotten wealth.

Reyeal true value

But Senate Minority Leader Aquilino "Nene" Q. Pimentel Jr. said it would be unwise for the government to forge an out-of-court settlement with the Marcos family if they "refuse to reveal the value of the assets that are under their possession and control." (Related story on Page A13.)

Pimentel also rejected a reported plan of the PCGG to allow the Marcoses to keep 30 percent of the plundered wealth because it would be "too big and can by no means be justilied, considering the length of time the Marcoses and their cronies had enjoyed the perks that money could buy,"

He suggested that the Marcos family be ailowed to retain "only 10 percent of the money,"

A special place

Today, Marcos continues to experience some of the worst-worst-worst in her life-despite the opulence of her apartment and the social swirl she still enjoys.

Since she returned from Hawaii in 1991, she has been fending off court cases—at one point narrowly avoiding jail.

Still, the government's lawyers are hounding her. No wonder Marcos feels put upon.

Even the Bible says there's a special place in hell for those who oppress widows and or-phans," she said. New York Times News Service

Victoria Soap representing countdown to the big event.

A cultural presentation titled "Panaghoy at Panata kay Inang Kalikasan" will kick off the countdown at 5 p.m. at the Bantayog ng mga Bayani in Quezon

The women's group Abanse! Pinay will also hold a requiem Mass for some 80 of its members who died in the mudslide in Southern Leyte last month.

"It's the first time we're doing a countdown to heighten environmental awareness," Sagip Pasig director Movement Jimenez said.

The 30-day countdown will feature a trade fair hosted by the business community. The fair will highlight organic and recycled materials and alternative livelihoods from solid waste management.

There will also be the annual fluvial parade from Intramuros to Mandaluyong City up the Pasig River, a signature campaign against mining and logging, and the Lason sa Kalikasan awards.

Not just blame game

Alcantara said the call for repentance and atonement seeks to instill in all sectors-the government, media, Church, industry, schools, families and even the Armed Forces-the need to care for the environment.

"It (environmental degradation) is not just a blame game. Not everything is the fault of the government ... It's a collective fault because we're stewards of creation," she said.

Rosales immediately said, "Sure," and assigned Smokey Mountain parish priest Fr. Ben Beltran as the point person between himself and Earth Day Network.

was considered an official gift from the Czech government, it carried more meaning for Ludva.

"I really fell in love with Jose Rizal," the diplomat told the INQUIRER. "A true ilustrado in those days, the most famous personality here and beyond this country."

Readings on Rizal

Ludva, who was assigned to Manila in September last year, said he first thought of a Czech translation of "Ultimo" in Jan-

Before sitting down to write, he read several books on Rizal-including two by Czech authors-which centered on the patriot's final hours as well as his friendship with Blu-

Although he translated the masterpiece from the original Spanish, he also studied the versions in English and German to further distill the hero's "message."

One weekend in late January, Ludva decided to send "my wife, my daughter and my mother-in-law to Mindoro, because I needed to be alone for 48 hours." he said.

He was home alone in his Forbes Park residence writing, "and within 48 hours I did it," he said.

'Jewel of romantic poetry'

Ludva said it was "very difficult" to do justice forthe poem in his mother tongue since he not only had to find the proper Czech words for Rizal's "rich Spanish vocabulary ... but I also wanted to capture his (Rizal's) good sense of thyme in that language."

The envoy described "Ultimo" as a "jewel of romantic poetry in East Asia."

And unless one knew of Rizal's situation when he wrote it, the reader could not easily sense that these were the musings of a man hours away from the firing squad, Ludva noted.

"You can feel that he was not [sad]. He was upbeat when the hero wrote it. Rizal's message to his closest friends and family was: 'Be happy, life is nice, I will give my life to my country because I want it to prosper in the future. It is my contribution to the next generation," he said.

"It was a long poem but it's wonderful and I admire him for that. He was about to be executed yet still he found something deep inside his soul to give to his countrymen," Ludva added.

Place of honor

An aspiring poet in his youth, Ludva said he considered his translation of "Ultimo" as his first "published" work in verse.

"Published" was an understatement, since the Czech version was mounted-on what could be considered a place of honor-right next to the original Spanish text on a wall of the Rizal Shrine.

"I have written a lot of poems but I was too shy to publish them because I felt some body would say it's not right. In those days. I was so devoted to writing poetry I thought it would be the end of my life if it was not accepted by the public," Ludva

"But now I have decided to return to my roots -and be more daring," he said "I think what I did was not only a must for a Czeci ambassador. It was more of a devotion."

From memory

On the night of the unveiling, Ludva apparently thought his two days translating the Rizal were not enough to honor the hero.

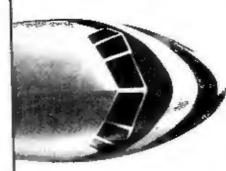

The program indicated he would give the closing remarks. But he went beyond the usual spiel and surprised everyone by reciting from memory the original Spanish version of

He delivered all 14 stanzas—each consist ing of five lines-to the applause of the gathering that included fellow diplomats, Philip pine officials and educators, or well as Rizal descendants.

The charges and his detention have created a "very depressing life," Estrada said, adding that acquittal would correct all the wrongs heaped upon him. This is a mistake and this should be corrected," he said.

Estrada, 68, said he would wear a native "barong" shirt and speak in Tagalog when he testifies to symbolize his love for the country he once promised to deliver from crushing poverty.

'No histrionics'

"There will be no statements, he'll just answer questions propounded by his counsel," said lawyer Raymond Portun. There will be no histrionics tomorrow."

Fortun yesterday told foreign correspondents that the defense would rest its case after Estrada's testimony. It is likely that Estrada will make several appearances at the Sandiganbayan. Hearings are held only once a week.

The court is expected to issue a verdict in September or October, Fortun said.

Fortun is just one in a battery of top caliber lawyers defending Estrada. It includes former Sen. Rene Saguisag, former Supreme Court Chief Justice Andres Narvasa and former Manila Prosecutor Jose Flaminiano.

Estrada will be the 79th defense witness in his trial on the capital charge of plunder that robbed him of power and consigned him to detention in his sprawling rest house in Tunay.

Prosecutors say the former President committed plunder-e nonbailable offense punishable by a maximum penalty of death by lethal injection-by amassing about P4 billion ($77 million) in illegal gambling payoffs, tax kickbacks and commissions stashed away in secret bank accounts.

Estrada also faces a minor charge of perjury for allegedly underreporting his assets in

Coached on testimony

Today's hearing is historic, according to Flaminiano. This will be the first time that Estrade will tell his side of the story. He said Estrada had reviewed all the evidence against him. The legal defense made Estrada recall all crucial events cited by the prosecution.

"We asked him about the testimony of Ilocos Sur Gov. Luis "Chavit" Singson and others," said Flaminiano, who will conduct Estrada's direct examination. "We did not have a problem."

He said that part of Estrada's nor in an interview.

The issues against Estrada

To hide his alleged illegally acguired wealth, Estrada was said to have maintained secret bank accounts, including one in the Equitable-PCI Bank where he had over P3.2 billion under the name Jose Velarde. This was ordered frozen in August 2002 by the Sandiganbayan. Five other banks subsequently turned over to the Ombudsman statements of Estrada's accounts, as well as of his two mistresses—Guia Gomez and Laarni Enriques. 2. Excise tax scam

In 1998, Estrada allegedly tax share of Hocos Sur allocated under RA 7171 (An Act to Promote the Development of Farmers in the Virginia Tobacco-Producing Provinces). The amount was allegedly divided among Estrada (P70 million), his wife Sen. Luisa "Loi" Ejercito (P20 million), his son Jinggoy (P15 million) and his friend Charlie "Atong" Ang (P25 million). 3. Illegal gambling payoffs

From November 1998 to August 2000, Estrada was said to have solicited and received from Gov. Luis "Chavit" Singson P545 million derived from the proceeds of illegal jueteng operations in llo-

A movie starring both FPJ and Erap kept their supporters awake for last night's vigil on the eve of Estrada's appearance before the Sandiganbayan.

The movie, "Ang Agila at ang Araw" was shown from an overhead projector on a huge canvas in front of the St. Peter's Parish where less than 100 people converged to show support for the deposed President.

"We want to keep Erap's supporters awake during the vigil,' said Dennis Ebona, national vice chair for Union of the Masses for Democracy and Justice.

Present during the vigil were Linggoy Alcuaz, secretary general of FPJ Volunteers' Brigade, and Rez Cortez of the National Council for Concerned Volunteers, another FPJ-affiliated group.

Members of the People's Movement Against Poverty and the Muslim group Assalam, and other groups identified with Estrada were present.

The groups lit candles in front of the church, where they said they would stay until midnight.

Police said they were closely watching the group but had no pian to disperse them unless the group tried to move away from the church and march toward the Sandiganbayan. With reports from Gil C. Cabacungan Jr., Luige A. del Puerto, DJ Yap, AP, Reuters

I have paid a painful and heavy price for my convictions. In 2001, I was twice offered exile in a country of my choice if only I were to submit a letter of resignation thereby laying a stamp of legitimacy on those who succeeded in mounting a coup d'etat against my presidency-a presidency which, by the way, I won fair and square a fact which even my most bitter political enemies could

Yet, despite the price I have had to pay, my detention has been. worth every second if only to prove my innocence to those who truly. matter the most: my countrymen. I intend to use my every appearance in court to relate the facts. Not facts as peddled by prosecution witnesses whose statements cannot be corroborated nor could they be supported by documents, but facts that are unquestionable and inarguable. In short, the absolute truth.

The past few months have been equally difficult ones for our country. Natural calamities have tragically claimed many lives. Our economy continues to lurch from one crisis to another. The social and moral fabric of our nation has literally been ripped asunder by flawed executive decisions, highlighted by the recent Presidential Proclamation Ne. 1017 which in my view is just a flimsy excuse to impose virtual martial rule.

I offer only a humble opinion from a Filipino citizen who has himself fallen victim to the viclousness of this regime: Our country is suffering from the sins of its current leaders. When lying, cheating and stealing become part and parcel of (mis)governance, there will be no end in sight to the impoverished future our countrymen face, nor to the polarization which holds sway in our society.

As a citizen accused of a crime, I shall appear in court to fight for my innocence, my honor and liberty.

But as a constitutionally elected President robbed of his mandate, I shall appear in court to fight for . the restoration of the rule of law and bring about an end to the rule of force which has blighted our land and shaken the very foundations of our democracy.

It is a battle that will be won by . truth. And only the truth can save ; our Republic.

Estrada's court appearance was initially set for March 15, but it was rescheduled to accommodate the defense request for more preparation time.

Flaminiano said Estrada's testimony would deal with his alleged secret bank accounts, the tobacco excise tax scam, claims of illegal gambling payoffs and his alleged intervention in the stock market to favor a crony, Dante Tan.

The final chapter

Estrada was forced to step down amid massive anticorruption protests in January 2001 that were partly led by then Vice President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, who completed the remainder of Estrada's six-year term and then won the 2004 election, which is now clouded by suspicions of fraud.

Estrada, a college dropout, parlayed his massive movie popularity-he won the local version of the Oscars five times-into a springboard to the presidency. But even some of his followers say he squandered his fame and power by bringing his carefree lifestyle into office.

Estrada has acknowledged his foibles but denied any wrongdo-

Malacañang is hopeful that Estrada's personal defense will be the last part in the long-running political saga between the administration and the former leader's supporters.

I think this will be the final chapter because now we can hear the former President defend himself and his defense team will rest its case after this," said Presidential Chief of Staff Michael Defen-

In the letter signed by Undersecretary Fatima Valdes, the Palace asked each diocese to choose five parishes for the rice and medicine program and to register them with the Office of Religious Affairs.

Each of the parishes will then receive seed money of P15,000 to be used to purchase rice from the NFA. The parish will then sell the rice to parishioners at P18 per kilo, which is lower than the commercial price.

No dignity

"It insults the poor, treating them like beggars," he explained. "There's no dignity in doling out cheap rice and medicine for the poor. These things are palliative."

If Malacañang is really serious about alleviating poverty, it should come up with programs to generate jobs and stable incomes, the bishop said.

Poverty is all over his province, highlighted by a long stretch of unpaved roads, he noted.

Despite the underdevelopment, the bishop said his diocese had one effective program allowing parishioners to borrow specific amounts to start small

"Give the people jobs and you'll give them back their dignity," he said.

Just a coincidence

Presidential Chief of Staff Michael Defensor said it was pure "coincidence" that some of the poorest of the poor that Malacañang was looking at lived in dioceses run by bishops critical of Ms Arrayo.

"We target the same areas because the people there need government help the most," Defensor

He said the Arroyo administration did not need to curry favor with the bishops in these areas because these projects would run purely on government initiative. With a report from Gil C. Cabacungan Jr.

Jose Honrado who was reappointed as military spokesman last week after the uproar caused by Kison's remarks.

Army's 109th anniversary celebration last Monday, after the media reported that Armed Forces Chief of Staff Gen. Generoso Senga had issued a command directive dated March 8 spelling out the military's role at these "trying times." In it, Senga stated that the military is "not Camp Aguinaldo by Brig. Gen. to be regarded as a potent political force to be used by politicians in the furtherance of their vested interests."

Senga also stated that the Kison showed up at the Armed Porces' constitutiona) mandate as protector of the people and the State "is not a license to wrest leadership of the government from public officials on the basis of perceived imperfections of governance."

"As mandated, we must remain apolitical," said Senga in his directive which was not released to the media until last Saturday

Troops curious, not restive, about 'Hello Garci' probe – Esperon

By Dona Z. Pazzibugan

THE TROOPS ARE not restive but merely "curious" about the non-disclosure of the results of the military's investigation into the alleged involvement of some generals in the "Hello Garci" election fraud scandal, according to Army chief Lt. Gen. Hermogenes Esper-

Esperon, one of the generals mentioned in the purtelephone conversations be-President Macapagal-Arroyo ex-Elections Commissioner Virgilio Garcillano on election-rigging operations, said he, too, wanted disclosure of the investigation report submitted by Navy chief Vice Admiral Mateo Mayuga to AFP Chief of Staff Gen. Generoso Senga last Jan-

"I'm excited about it," Esperon told reporters in Fort Bonifacto.

The results have been kept under wraps since the fiveman fact-finding board wrapped up its investigation last October. Senga says he has forwarded the report to De-Secretary Avelino Cruz Jr, who in turn says he will submit it to the who President, would then decide whether to make it

Esperon rejected reports there was restiveness in the ranks because of the involvement of the generals in the alleged election cheat-

"Maybe restive ness is not the... appropriate word to describe their feelings," Esperon said

"I just feel that we really need to inform [the] public about what really he transpired, added "Isn't everybody curious about informa-[that]

Esperon has denied involvement in any election irregularity as did the other generals. He also demed that Marine Brig Gen, Francisco Gudani [who retired last Oct. 4] was reheved as brigade commander

Ranao chief during the canvassing of votes in the Lanac provinces allegedly to facilitate the cheating

"Some people might get restive on that [issue] depending on their pre-dis-But positions. restriveness is thing; doing violent actions in connection with that restiveness is another," Esperon said, apparently referring to an alleged plot by some military units to withdraw support from the President last Feb.

Sen. Rodolfo Biazon had said that Brig. Gen. Danilo Lim of the Scout Rangers and Coi. Ariel Querubin of the Marines were among the officers who complained to him and Task Force last July 2 about the lack of investigation then into the military involvement in "Hello Garci" scandal

Still, Esperon and the other so-called "Hello Garci" generals were promoted, triggering the military unrest, Biazon said.

named Army chief last August. In January, Maj. Gen. Gabriel Habacon was named chief of the AFP Southern Command while Rear Admiral Tirso Danga. who beaded the Isafp at the time of the alleged wiretapping, was named AFP Western Command

'Bookies' sabotage STL

By Delfin T. Mallart Jr. PDI Southern Luzon Bureau

LUCENA CITY-BARELY A month after the government-sanctioned Small Town Lottery (STL) started operating in Quezon, the numbers game was being sabotaged by "bookies" or Jiegal betting stations.

Len Renomeron, Philippine Charity Sweepstakes Office-Quezon branch manager, said her office was receiving reports that illegal STL betting stations had started to proliferate in some parts of the province.

"The police should stop these operations. It is their duty to protect the STL since they also have a stake in its success," Renomeron said.

Under the PCSO sharing system, 30 percent of the net sales of the STL operation will be divided as follows city or municipal government, 10 percent; provincial government, 5 percent, local pohce, 5 percent, and each congressional district, 2.5 percent.

The PCSO official acknowledged that she had expected the operations of illegal STL betting stations. "There's already a special task force especially assigned to get nd of them," Renomeron said.

She said that patronizing STL games run by bookies was against the law and that any bettor or collector for the underground lottery faced arrest

Several STL sales representatives or "cobradores" have revealed to the Inquires that some of their fellow bet takers had been submitting the collected bets not to the official STL station but to the diegal bookles.

"We can't blame them. They receive a much higher commission (from the bookies) than from the PCSO," said one of the STL empioyees.

With the proliferation of book ies, STL bet collectors complained that their coilections were getting smaller every day.

"The bookies offer a much higher cash por than the one being offered by the official STL station. That's why the bettors go to the bookie joints," the collector said.

Puno to run gov't 'jueteng'

the designation of Puno as STL implementor, Pimentel said. "STL may be a source of funds that may not be strictly accountable for activities of the administration people '

Puno said STL operations nationwide would be deferred until its legality was clarified and its implementation made clear.

"Now that the PCSO has done an experimental run, it should review its guidelines to see whether there are any improvements to be made to ensure that STL is not in violation of any existing law," Puno said at a press con-

The postponement began over the weekend and would last until the Department of Interior and Local Government (DHG) and the Philippine National Police were given clear guidelines on how the numbers game would be implemented, he said

Hagedorn and the PCSO had planned to start STL operations this week in five areas-Quezon, Laguna, Palawan, Bicol and

Charter change

Opposition Sen. Panfilo "Ping" Lacson, for his part, said that Puno's new role could be connected to the government's push to amend the 1987 Constitution through a people's initiative

"The connection is too glaring to ignore. Even his illegal assumption as interior secretary without being confirmed by the Commission on Appointments in clear violation of the Constitution is not without motive," he said

Lacson said Malacañang wanted to amend the Charter to extend Ms Arroyo's term be-

"She has no choice but to stay in power, lest she will suffer Erap's fate once she loses presidential tramumity,™ Lacson said, referring to Estrada who was ousted in 2001 and indicted for plunder.

The STL project had been on the drawing boards since the Aquino administration but it had failed to take off despite several attempts due to logistical problems and strong opposinon from the Church.

No more pretending

This time, there's no more pretending STL is the government version of jueteng, the muntibillion-peso underground lottery.

The STL test run involved familiar characters involved in justeing

In the document, a copy of which was obtained by the Inquiner, an STL sales agent was explicitly identified as a "cobrador" while a sales supervisor went by the title of "cabo." ,

A sales agent stands to get 10 percent and a sales supervisor 2 percent of the operating fund that would comprise 15 percent of the net reventies of STL, according to the document.

STL will have three daily draws much like its underground counterpart.

President Macapaga. Arroyo will go down in history as the only President to take justeng to the mainstream," antijueteng crusader Archbishop Oscar Cruz told the INQUIRER.

"The present administration appears to have become a devious expert in sucking in the money of people," Cruz said

Deed of authority

The PCSO board of directors approved the "Revised Deed of Authority and the Revised Rules and Regulations Governing the Conduct of the Actual Test Runs for the PCSO Small Town Lottery Project" through Resolution No. 464.

It was signed by PCSO chair Sergio Vaiencia, general manager Rosano Unarte and directors Manuel Morato, Victor Domingo and Teresita Gonzalez in a board meeting on Dec. 28, 2005.

Capital stock of P20M

Under the terms, an 'Authority to Conduct Test Runs" for STL would be granted only to corporations fully owned by Filipino citizens with a minimum capital stock of P20 million and a minimum paid-up capital of P5 million.

They would also have to deposit a cash bond of not less than P10 million with the PC-SO treasury department

The PCSO board said a corporation should either be into "product marketing and aihed services" or "duly organized for the purpose of conducting actual test runs" for STL.

"It must possess the necessary competence, expertise and capitalization to undertake the project as shall be determined by the office (PCSO)," the document said.

Jueteng lord can run STL

Defensor said it was important that the guidelines for choosing franchise operators would be set up in a transparent manner.

"We don't want to be accused of favoring a group and giving it accommodation. Whether he is a jueteng operator or not, it does not mat ter. He will only get a franchise if he is qualified under the guidelines," Defensor said Cruz, head of the Krusadang Bayan Laban sa Jueteng, said STL would practically be run by the "same jueteng lords under dummy personalities or corporations using the same jueteng administrators and collectors.

Same victims, beneficiaries

"STL and jueteng have exactly the same victims twice exploited, the poor, the same beneficiaries twice favored, certain local officials and police authorities, and the same gambling lords twice enriched," the archbishop said

The prelate said the revival of STL might in fact be related to the 2007 elections in which the Arroyo administration would have to "dance with gamb.ing .ords as usua...

Like jueteng, which involves number combinations from 1 to 38, the STL test run will have combinations up to 40 numbers. The new game is to be called "Pick-Two 1, 40."

There will only be one STL test run for every province and "chartered city," according to the PCSO document.

Who gets what

Five percent of the gross revenues of STL will go to the "agent corporation" while another 5 percent will go to taxes

The remaining 90 percent will be for prizes, and charity and operating funds

In the so-called charity fund, 10 percent will be given to the city or municipality, 5 percent to the province, 2.5 percent to the district, 5 percent to the local police, and 7.5 percent to the PCSO.

Jueteng operators are widely believed to spread grease money among local poice and government officials to stay in business. With a report from TJ Burgonlo

Nationwide PCGG's terms for deal with Marcoses: Full disclosure hunt is on

for Gringo By Margaux C. Ortiz

A NATIONWIDE MANHUNT FOR former Senator Gregorio "Gringo" Honasan who is considered "armed and dangerous" is on as the National Bureau of Investigation (NBI) distributed copies of his arrest warrant to its regional offices.

Regional Director Reynaldo Esmeralda, NBI Special Task Force (STF) chief, said he had also instructed the bureau's regional offices to give his office a periodic update on their operations against Honasan

"As of now, we still do not have particular areas of concentration because there are no reports about the actua, whereabouts of the former senator," Esmeralda told reporters yesterday.

including "All fugitives, Honasan, are considered armed and dangerous," Esmeralda added

The NBI STF chief also said that he has requested the Department of Justice to file a motion for the issuance of a hold departure order against Honasan before the Makati Regional Trial Court (RTC) Branch 145, which issued the warrant against the former senator for the crime of coup d'etat.

THE PRESIDENTIAL COMMISsion on Good Government said vesterday it would require the Marcoses to disclose the extent of their assets in the Philippines and overseas before it would enter into a compromise with the family.

PCGG Commissioner Ricardo Abcede made the statement following the call by some senators, Aquilino Pimentel among them, for the Marcoses to disclose all their assets before the government would negotiate with them.

Abcede, however, clarified the PCGG was not about to demand immediate disclosure by the Marcoses, saying doing so would only be one part of the negotiations.

"Some have said Mrs. Marcos should reveal her assets. Sure, that should be part of it. There is a process here, Abcede said.

He said the first stage of any negotiation should be explorato-

"We need to see what the requirements from both sides are. One of the first requirements of the government is full disclosure. We can talk later about the sharing," he said.

Abcede claimed he was "misquoted" when he suggested a 70-30 sharing scheme in favor of the government for the Marcos wealth in exchange for the dropping of the civil cases against the family. He said the sharing plan would be worked out larer.

The Marcoses are facing more

EFENSE SECRETARY AVELINO CRUZ DECORATED Maj Gen. Jovito Palparan Jr. with the Distinguished Service Star, and showered him with accolades during the celebration of Army Day last Monday. And there seems to be no other direction Palparan's career is headed

His latest commendation comes in the wake of what he and the Armed Forces insist are achieve-EDITORIAL ments in the field in Samar. The targets of his efforts -dissident groups-say he presided over a systematic liquidation campaign of political activists. Palparan counters by suggesting that the onby liquidating going on is at the hands of CPP-NPA cadres who are interested in purging their ranks and passing off the summary executions as the handswork of the military.

Last week, in Davao City, Rauml Mortejo, chair of Anakbayan in that city, stepped out of his office-only to be accosted, according to him, by unidentified men who bundled him into a van whose license plates had been covered. The men proceeded to interrogate him about his activities and the people he dealt with. For close to an hour, he was questioned and warned to stop his political activities.

Last Sunday in Albay, Cris Hugo, a journalism student, was assassinated as he walked home with his professor. Hugo was a coordinator in the local chapter of the League of Filipino Students. He had been receiving death threats and even visits from armed men who sought to dissuade hun from further engaging in political activities.

On the same day Palparan was decorated for his antiinsurgency achievements, the wife and son of a peasant leader were killed in Zambales. The farmer himself was gravely wounded in the attack.

We therefore have, on the one hand, an administration that is eager to promote and honor an officer, Palparan, without so much as seriously and thoroughly investigating allegations of human rights violations on his part. On the other hand, the same administration continues to remain unimpressed—and unconcerned—with what can only be described as a shadowy effort to eliminate dissident leaders in the countryside.

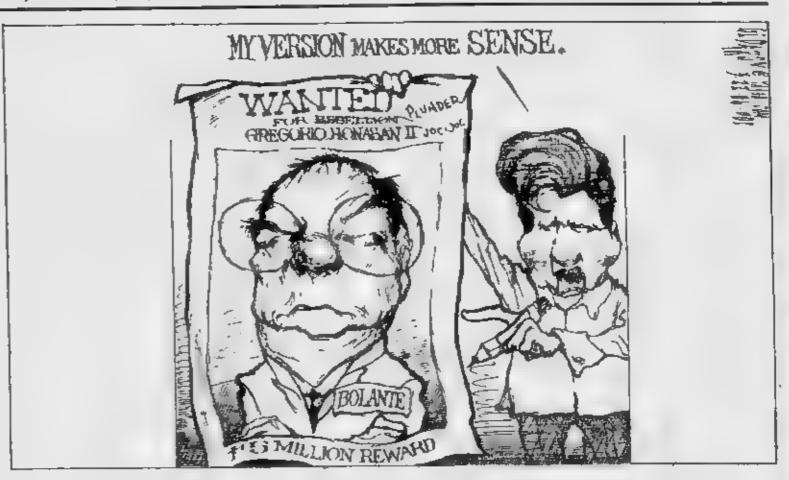

Amnesty International has been expressing alarm over this trend, but naturally this is being ignored by the powers that be. Hard questions need to be asked, however, as the Arroyo administration embarks on an all-out offensive against the CPP-NPA and those it considers to be communist front organizations or their allies.

The first question involves the wisdom of practically abandoning the peace process, which has been ongoing, with varying levels of success, for two decades in comparison to the communist insurgency's 40 years of armed struggle. We have known since the 1950s that insurgency cannot be defeated without attending to the root causes of revolution, just as the citizenry cannot simply be abandoned to the tender mercies of revolutionaries as a political solution is sought. We also know that the saying "Talk is cheap but lives are not" makes peace talks a worthy investment in terms of time and effort.

The second question involves the implications of fiercely defending military officers regardless of whether or not criticisms against them have a basis. This can only demoralize the Armed Forces, which will earn the enmity and hatred of a citizenry who finds it impossible to seek justice or obtain redress for abuses committed in the field.

The third question involves the true implications of an administration policy which might actually inspire more and more people to abandon their quest for change within constitutional limits or by participating in democratic exercises, and instead, head for the hills or go underground. Continued official indifference to what is clearly a systematic policy of extermination can only suggest to dissidents that they are sitting ducks if they persist in staying above-ground and continue to engage in legal political activities. It will drive them to undertake their own, calibrated preemptive response against a society that denies them democratic space. And this can only lead to more ambuscades, more burnings of provincial outposts and cell sites, more assassinations, more murder, more fighting, more deaths and destruction.

In the end, we must ask President Macapagal-Arroyo if she agrees with the American soldier in Vietnam who said that in order to save a village, it must be destroyed.

Napocor on another borrowing spree

HERE IS MORE BAD NEWS NOT ONLY POR electricity consumers but also for all citizens. The Epira Law (Energy and Power Industry Reform Act), which provides for the privatization of the National Power Corp., with the proceeds supposedly going to pay for the gargantuan debts of the power firm and reduce our foreign and domestic debts and our budget deficit, is not being implemented by Napocor officials. Instead, it is embarking on another borrowing binge for which the Filipino taxpayers will ultimately have to pay. The Napocor borrowed $800 million last year. It has announced that it will borrow another $700 million this year. The Power Sector Assets and Liabilities Management (PSALM), an agency tasked by the Epira Law to oversee the privatization of Napocor, has already absorbed P200 billion of Napocor's debts and has declared that it will absorb another $500 milhon (or P26 billion) more. Who will pay for all these? We the taxpayers, of course, including those who don't Napocor's debts, which contribute immensely to the ballooning budget deficit of the government, are also a result of controversial power projects that to date remain idle due to legal infirmities and lack of clear vision as to how the power sector should be handled. The Epira Law could have prevented our government from further hemorrhaging, but what the Napocor did and continues to do is the opposite.

The foreign debts of the Napocor now add up to $9.1 billion. This does not include its obligations to local creditors, which also amount to billions of pesos. Napocor's foreign and domestic debts total about one-third of our total debts. The total reached about $9 6 billion in mid-2005, from only about $6.2 bil-

President Macapagal-Arroyo contributed immensely in the hemorrhage when she ordered the reduction of the purchased power adjustment being collected by Napocor from its buyers, including the Manila Electric Co., from P1.25 per kilowatt hour to only 40 centavos per kWh in 2002. The reduction further weighed down Napocor's viability.

During the last quarter of 2005, Napocor again went on a borrowing spree, selling about P11 billion worth of zero-coupon bonds to be used to pay for maturing obligations and capital expenditures. These bonds are again guaranteed by the national government or the taxpayers, in other words.

Napocor's debts go round and round in never-ending cycles that sink it deeper into a morass of debts. New loans are made to pay for maturing debts, and so on, so the debts just get bigger and bigger.

More than four years ago, Napocor promised that once the Epira Law was enacted, electricity costs would go down. Four years later, Napocor reneged on its promise by intentionally blocking efforts to privatize its assets, causing it to incur more debts that are added to our national debt. Recently, it announced that it had sold at least 10 percent of its assets, already way below the original target of 70 percent by 2004

Congress found out, however, that Napocor officials were hiding the real figures. Only 3 percent of the "gencos" (power generation companies) have been sold, said Sen. Joker Ar-

We are tired of the lame excuses Napocor officials give for the delays in the sale of these gencos. Four years after the passage of the Epira Law, they have done very little to transfer the titles, get the approval of the creditors for the sale or firm up transition supply contracts. These are the reasons potential investors back away from the bidding for some plants.

There is only one reason Napocor officials are delaying privatization; they want to keep their lucrative jobs. And who wouldn't, when its officials enjoyed P1.2 billion in kickbacks and commissions from coal and oil importation alone, billions more in commissions from bond flotation and shady deals, and a P12-bil lion retirement package?

After collecting the P12-billion retirement package, the same Napocor officials were rehired as consultants and it can be surmised that they are again back in business. At least 25 executives and senior officials availed themselves of this retirement package, each pocketing about P120 million. The same officials created companies that cornered contracts with Napocor. Some of them were found to be still collecting huge sums of money from Napocor power plants and electric cooperatives as consultants. At least one former official's company was found to be still collecting P400,000 a month from Zambales (Electric) II as part of the management contract it signed with the

Remember also that Napocor is the sole buyer of fuel (coal, bunker oil, diesel) for Independent Power Producers (IPPs) Why? Because Napocor does not pay taxes, while IPPs pay 3 percent tariff. Napocor gets kickbacks from the Napocor oil and coal imports amount to about $300 million a year. Ten percent of that is $30 million or P1.5 billion. The government is losing P1.5 billion worth of kickbacks to Napocor officials

It is obvious that its own officials have made Napocor their own private treasure chest. Arroyo said he would bring the retirement package scam to the Senate blue ribbon committee. After all, it dwarfs even the fertilizer scam which cost the taxpayers only P720

It appears that Napocor is being sabotaged from within-by the very same people who are running it. What is the President doing about readily seen in the two Edsas. The "no" to Marcos naturally presupposed a "yes" to Cory. That was what made Cory's vow to be "the opposite of Marcos" a most powerful thing. The saying no to an evil presupposed a saying yes to a good. Just as well, the saying no to Erap presupposed a saying yes to the good represented by the combined forces of civil society, the Church, business, media and the ordinary citizens. Contrary to rumor, this country does not need a face for an "alternative." Steeped as we are in interpersonal relations, we needed only an idea, goal, or hope of a better life to remove Erap. It was not a face that launched a thousand ships, or 10,000 people, at Edsa II. GMA is to Helen of Troy as hell is to beaven, politically as much as aesthetically. If we had only been reflecting on what a musician said that GMA to inspire us during Edsa II, all the ships night, which was that we seemed to have would have sunk, if indeed they could have ment in a night of music. been coaxed to sail in the first place. The link between saying yes to a good while saying no to an evil is broken today. The "yes" is not presupposed in the "no." Saying no to GMA does not naturally contain in its pores its assumed opposite. The good remains an unknown quantity, whether in thought or in feeling, whether starkly or vaguely. That's what's causing the apathy and cynicism notwithstanding, as the surveys bear out, the near-usuversal detestation of the regime, Indeed, that's what's causing a good deal of the public to say, "Sawa na ako sa pulitika (I'm tired of politics)." That is little helped by the fact that the faces the public sees condemning tyranny also include Brap loyalists, the people who helped GMA steal the vote, and assorted trapos who just happen to belong to the other side. The condemnation of evil cannot soar to moral heights with that leaden "political" baggage That's what made the concert last Thursday the magical thing it was. It restored the link between saying no to an evil and yes to a good, it reconstituted the bond between negation and affirmation, it re-forged the connection between protest and hope. For the first time in quite a long time, there was a pure voice raised against tyranny, giving the public to rekindle dreams once again. There, you found the inextricable link, bond, connection between saying no to dictatorship and yes to freedom. There you found an unbreakable link, bond, connection between saying "Never again!" to martial law and saying "Ever again!" to all that is decent and honest and life-affirming. The one presupposed the other, fused in the fires of mu-

People would tell me later we might have stumbled on an alternative form of protest. I thank them for saying that, but I have to say as well that we did not discover anything new, we merely rediscovered something old. But that has nearly been forgotten: You need a pure voice for the condemnation of evil to take on moral wings. You need a pure voice for the voice of God, or the people-which, as the phrase "you populi, you Dei" tells us, is but one and the same thing-to be heard. That was what made people power happen in the past, that is what will make people power happen in

I personally think that it is the voice of musicians, and of artists and intellectuals generally-poets, writers (including journalists), painters, theater people, moviemakers, philosophers, etc.-and not those of the usual suspects that will ring, or sing, loudest in the coming months. Theurs is an honest voice, theirs is a melafluous voice, theirs will be a thunderous voice. It is their protest against evil that will give us to see what is good. It is a natural aversion to chains that will help us break them. Some will call it practical magic, I like to think of it as poetic justice.

That is not as convoluted as it seems and is

Why aren't people marching to oust GMA?

PUBLIC OPINION SURVEY ORGANIZATIONS have made it their magnificent obsession to track the fall of the popularity rating of President Macapagal-Arroyo since the May 2004 elections.

The latest surveys, by Pulse Asia taken from Peb. 18 to March 4, 2006, and by the Social Weather Stations from Nov. 17 to Dec. 4, 2005, draw a grim picture of the administration desperately struggling to climb out of the deep dungeon into which its ratings had sunk, making Ms Arrayo the most unpopular and reviled President the Philippines has ever had, barring none.

The tracks on the surveys' screens show a blueprint of more of the same results, from which the public is not deriving much information about the mood of public opinion. In the case of Ms Arroyo' ratings, the assumption that in a democracy public opinion shifts constantly has been turned on its head. The ratings have become stable in depicting she has indeed been trapped in a deep hole Question is: Is there hope for her to boit out? Is there an exit route?

The Pulse Asia survey shows that 59 percent of respondents believed her resignation would be to the best interest of the country, indicating the extent of public disapproval of her performance. The survey found that the percentage of those interviewed after the declaration of a national emergency on Feb. 24 who wanted her to resign rose to 61, compared to 53 percent among those interviewed prior to the declaration. Pulse Asia interpreted these findings as suggesting that the deciaration of a national emergency may have reade more Filipinos want to see her step down.

The Feb. 18 to March 4 survey reaffirmed the results of Pulse Asia's survey of October 2005, which found that the majority of Filipinos considered the resignation or removal of Ms Arroyo as the best way to solve the current positical stalemate. From another perspective, the SWS survey of Nov. 27 to Dec. 4, 2005, found that 54 percent of respondents were dissatisfied with the President's performance, leading the polling firm to conclude that the results cemented Ms Arroyo's niche as the most disliked President since 1986

The picture drawn by the surveys essentially boils down to widespread revulsion against the regime, manifesting public opinion, as it was affected by the several crises that the regime has undergone, including the impeachment complaint against the President and the aborted coup

The findings of the surveys all Indicate that the majority of the people want her to go and are dissatisfied with or disapproved of her performance. This leads me to wonder why, despite these findings, she has hung on to power. I would like to think a number of thoughtful citizens are also asking the very politically crucial question: Why is it that this apparently broad constituency of dissatisfied has not translated into mass political action that would force the President out of office?

It is no longer helpful to explain this apathy to "people power fatigue," an explanation favored by tired and lazy minds. Rather, I am raising questions that ought to be answered by the survey organizations and their researchers. This issue is underlined by the fact that since July last year, the President has survived all challenges to oust her, including several calls for people power, Cabinet defections, an impeachment complaint and the coup attempt of Feb. 24, 2006.

The surveys are supposed to reflect the existence of the constituency for ouster. Where then did this constituency go when the calls for mobifization were issued? Why has it not responded and instead remained exasperatingly indifferent to the alleged wrongdoings of the Arroyo regime? The survey results indicate overwhelming public duaffection, but why is it that this undercurrent of disgruntlement has not been tapped to drive the movements for political change?

On the other hand, it may be argued that the President has used the resources of the presideney to hold on to power. It is also clear that she has been receiving support from the provincial governors and mayors who form the political grassroots machinery of the regime. The big question s. Where does the allegiance of the majority identified by the surveys belong? A related question is: Is this a phantom majority that does not show up in the streets when it is needed most?

The surveys have been followed closely by the political players who want to know whether the public mood would back calls for mobilization for mass action to topple the regime and provide mass muscle to or justification for military intervention or withdrawal of support from the regime. But the surveys have so far proved to be unproductive to those who have based their calculations for mounting coup attempts or people power demonstrations on their results. Are they misreading the aigus? Are they magnifying the existence of this public opinion? How about the other aide of public opinion, that is the stlent one held by those who have been apathetic to the calls to go out to the streets?

Maybe some questions should be directed to the public opinion survey-takers. The surveys have focused on the domain of the disgruntled. Why have they not asked why people are not rushing to the streets to join the stampede to oust the Arroyo regime? Already, the survey results derived mostly from opinion of the disgrantled and the converted have resulted in a distorted picture of political reality and disastrous political miscalculations demonstrated by misfired coups and failed attempts at people power, I am just asking questions.

I BOUGHT THE DEC. 19, 2005, ISSUE OF TIME MAGAZINE, attracted by the cover's blurb: "The Best Photos of 2005." The photographs were a powerful way to synthesize a turbulent year, yet in the end, the issue's best picture was actually an early 18th-century painting from Peru, entitled "St Joseph and the Child Jesus,"

The painting, by an unknown artist, is very masculine with its solid dark colors, yet it touches the viewer in the way Joseph carries the

PINOY

Van Biema, focusing on a revival of interest in the "hidden virtues" of St. Joseph. I looked up that Time article again last Sunday, March 19, St. Joseph's feast day.

Stand-in

Joseph is actually almost invisible in the New Testament, almost like a substitute or stand-in actor, waiting to play a bit role. He is silent, without a single quote attributed to him. He figures only in Jesus' early years, disappearing when Jesus turns 12 and acknowledges his beavenly Pather

Now there's renewed interest in Joseph and, surprisingly, this comes from the Protestants, who don't usually give that much attention to saints. Van Biema explains how Presbyterian minister Howard Edington, mourning the death of an adopted son, went headlong into writing a book about Jesus' adoptive father. The product, "The Porgotten Man of Christmas: Joseph's Story," was published in 2000, based on extensive research into the Bible as well as non-biblical

Joseph also plays a lead role in a religious novel, "Holding Heaven," by Jerry Jenkins, author of the apocalyptic "Left; Behind" series. On a more secular front, Anne Rice's latest best-seller, "Christ the Lord: Out of Egypt," gives Joseph a revitalized role, guiding the pregnant Mary to Egypt to escape

fronically, it is the lack of biblical information about Joseph that allows writers, religious or secular, to create and recreate him in different forms, according to the needs of the

A 2nd-century text, called "The Protoevangehum of James," glorifies Joseph's role as a "chaste caretaker." When you think of the circumstances here, we should probably add 1 "courageous" to the description of Joseph. We have to remember Mary was probably a controversial figure: pregnant, very young (probably 14 or 15) and anmarried. The "Protocvange.ium" describes Joseph's own reluctance when asked, in his own version of an Annunciation, to care for Mary.

The "Protoevangelium" depicts Joseph as a very old man, with children from a previous marriage. On one hand, that depiction was probably meant to emphasize he couldn't have been the one who got Mary pregnant. On the other hand, the "Protoevangelium" describes doubts, maybe suspicions of Joseph as a dirty old man. When this May-December couple shows up at the temple for their betrothal, the high priest supposedly subjects them to a trial by ordeal, drinking a "drink of conviction"; if one of them had been lying about the pregnant Mary's virginity, they would have died from the drink. The "Protoevangelium" has Mary and Joseph surviving, of course, since the early Church needed to emphasize female chastity.

Joseph was to remain invisible for the next few centuries, until the 14th century, when he was rehabilitated, as a younger man, into a more involved father. This was at a time when Europe was going through famine, war and an epdemic. Social institutions, especially the family, were thre ened, so the reemergence of Joseph, this time to head a Holy Family, was convenient.

Van Biema analyzes the current revival of interest in Joseph against a backdrop of religion in America. Joseph's unportant again for evengelical Christians, as they seek ways to "masculinize" religion: convincing more males to attend church services, and finding ways to allow male bonding. similar to that of Joseph and Jesus, in churches.

Catholic or Protestant, our religious leaders might want to look at how they might recruit St. Joseph to handle some problems in 21st-century Filipmo society.

In macho societies like our own, fatherhood is seen mainly as a biological act, which is in turn closely linked to notions of masculinity. In the Philippines, men don't think twice about boasting that they have five children, "lahat pangangy" (all eldest), meaning the children were sired with different women

The boasting will often include claims that they're not supporting the children, that they were able to sow their wild. oats and get away with it, free of any responsibility to the woman he impregnated, and to the product(s) of that list-

Still another perverse variation on these drinking session! stories is how they were able to impregnate a married woman, so that it's another male, the cuckolded one, who has to take the responsibility for raising the child.

Act of faith Yet when you look hard at Filipino machismo, you'll find there's a strong undercurrent of insecurity, especially around fatherhood. Motherhood, after all, is said to be an act of knowledge, while fatherhood is an act of faith. Put another way, women know who their children are, men can only believe the children are his. Traditionally, a child resembling the neighbor could be explained away as part of poglilihi, meaning the mother had stared too hard at the neighbor while she was pregnant. Paternal angst has grown in this age of oversens workers, as men leave their wives behind for a

Because of the traditional values that encourage men to abscord after getting a woman pregnant, other men will come into the picture, challenged to accept a woman and offspring from other relationships. There are good men like St. Joseph all around us, who won't ask for a DNA test to validate paternity. I know one man, who works as a government clerk, raising four children, only one of whom is his own biological offspring. The other three are his common-law wife's, from previous relationships. I have never seen him favoring his own biological child over the oth-

I would like to think there are many more like him, but ! know too of stories where a cuckolded husband takes out his rage, day after day, on the child produced from the adulterous affair. And we know, too, of the statistics around child sexual abuse, where many cases involve a stepfather as an offender, rationalizing that he has sexual rights over his stepchildren because he has to support

Religious leaders will need to find ways to get St. Joseph to help deal with these problems. The messages can revolve around the theme of a tunoy na latake or "true male." A true male chooses to be a futher. A true male, like St. Joseph, becomes more male when he learns to go beyond biology to care for children, not his, and yet, eventually, his.

EVERYTHING OLD IS NEW AGAIN, AT LEAST AS far as pop acts go All faded musical stars need do, it seems, is to hang around and wait until their fans are old enough to start earning disposable income but still young enough to remember their youth and want to re-live it. Then the stars will get a second wind, a chance to kick-start a reborn career years after the first blush of success has given way to obsolescence.

in the past few months alone, we have played host-and enthusiastic audiences-to such resurrected 1960s acts as The Cascades, The Zombies, Peter and Gordon, Chad and Jeremy, Spiral Stare-case, Herman's Hermits, even Andy Williams and I have a confession to make. I've never been tempted to watch any of these shows, even if I could, if I wanted, cadge a free ticket or two from the promoters, and even if the hubby and I are devotees of RJFM, where "the latest and the greatest" pop hits are aired, to the delight of our generation of Boomers. The closest I got to buying a ticket aboard the nostalgia train was for the Chad and Jeremy concert, since as a young girl I would be moved to tears by their bailads. But my enthusiasm evaporated when I saw a publicity shot of the duo and spotted two geezers who looked even older than my father, as I remembered him. Now, why would I pay good money to listen to a geriatric pair? A pair, moreover, who would only remind me of how many years and decades have passed since I was a teenager mooning over mellow melodies and sappy lyrics.

STILL, I can appreciate why people of my age group would be drawn to these bands and performers. Our teens and early adulthood, after all, are often the best times of our lives, when we were carefree and had no more serious concerns than getting our crush to ask us out to the school dance.

It is a time worth looking back on, and the songs of pop idole provided the soundtrack to those days, the memories easily summoned by a few hummable bars, familiar chords and lyrics that rise unbidden in our failing memories.

AT LARGE

Besides, it's our last hurrah. I suspect that we are less than a decade away before the songs of our generation go the way of the kundimun and Diomedes Maturan. Why, even early Madonna hits are now considered Golden Oldies!

So before our own faculties grow too feeble to be of any use, we might as well put our earnings to good use by taking a nostalgic musical trip, back to the days when songs had distinct melodies and danceable tunes, and the words, however silly, were at least intelligible and made sense. Now, if only they could get the original Monkees, especially Davy Jones, to get together and disprove the nasty rumor that they pre-dated Milli Vanilli by staging a live concert here, I might yet be convinced to get on this bandwagon to our pop music past.

NOT exactly a nostalgic trip, and indeed a homage to the life changes that women of a certain age are going through, is the musical "We're Still Hot," onstage every weekend until April at the new Teatrino in Greenhals.

"Hot" in the musical's title could refer to the hot flashes that women experience as they go through menopause, but it could also refer to the four women in the cast, whose stories and songs prove that even as women age, they never really lose steam.

Originally staged in Canada before making a successful off-Broadway run, "We're Still Hot" tells the story of three high school classmates who are putting up a musical revue on the occasion of their 35th reunion. Kate was a promising writer who dreamed of conquering Broadway before early motherhood and a failed marriage doomed her to a series of dead-end jobs and even welfare. Mamie is a high-powered CEO who has never really found personal happiness, moving through a string of husbands and boyfriends, in ciuding her latest, a 21-year-old stud. Cynthia was on her way to a voice scholarship at La Scala before her boyfriend and husband-to-be convinced her to set her dreams aside in favor of "proper" wifehood, including catering to his every need. When a fourth classmate fails to show up, Zsu Zsu, a cleaning lady who it turns out was a musical star in her native Hungary, volunteers and puts some artistic discipline into their original amateur production.

MARGIE Moran-Floirendo, one of the women behind Bahaghari, the production outfit behind "We're Still Hot," says she first saw the musical in New York and was fired with the idea of bringing it to Manila. "It not only talks about menopause and aging, but also about how a woman can change and turn her life around," says Margie.

Indeed, on the second night of the Manila production, "We're Still Hot" seems to have attracted the right demographic—women approaching or long past middle-age who "get" the jokes about menopause and even more so the sexually charged lyrics. The hands-down number that brings the audience to loud cheering and plause, though, is when Cynthia, portrayed by a spirited Pinky Marques, finally breaks out of her shell and not only tells off her philandering husband Chuck but also discovers her inner rebel.

The rest of the cast are just as effective and affecting. Lynn Sherman may be a bit too young for a musical on menopause, but when, as Kate, she sings of coming to terms with her own artistry, she hits the heartstrings. Shamaine Centenera as the spark plug Marnie is energetic and compelling. A surprise is Nina Romualdes as Zeu Zeu in her first stage outing. Though tentative at times, she brings a measure of confidence and even comedy to her role.

"It's like a giant consciousness-raising session," I told Margie at the musical's end. There's certainly a lot of passion and empowerment—and heat—in this musical.

Japanese history on the Internet

LAST WEEK, A SMALL GATHERING OF LIBRARsans, archivists and cultural workers was convened by Salvacion Arlante, librarian of the University of the Philippines, to meet Ishii Yoneo, director general of the Japan Center for Asian Historical Records (JACAHR). What I presumed to be a social call was actually an introduction to the work they are doing in Japan with regard to historical records and, more precisely, how they are digitizing these records and making them available on the internet

What I found astounding is the fact that the Japanese National Archives houses a collection of over 1.1 million books and approximately 550,000 Japanese government documents and publications dating from the Melji Period (1868-1912) to the present. One wonders how our own National Library and Records Management and Archives Office (RMAO), which passes itself off as the "National Archives," will compare in terms of size. If you want a graphic description of the Japanese collection, if laid end to end, the bookshelves would run to about 35 kilometers. That's about the same distance from Manila to Bulacan

With all the controversy that surrounds Japan's way of remembering its own history, especially its role in Asia during World War II, one would think it would be difficult to access its historical records. Fortunately, the Americans carted off all the records they could find from Japan to Washington where everything was opened, processed and microfilmed Decades later, the original materials were returned to Japan. These materials now form an important section of the Japan Center for Historical Records that was established under the Japan National Archives.

The same thing was done with the records of our short-lived Philippine Republic. When Emilio Aguinaldo's seat of government in Maiolos fell into American hands in 1899 and he fled to Palanan, Isabela, all the government records were carted away to Washington, where they were sorted out, microfilmed, and eventually returned to Manila in the late 1950s when the US Library of Congress and National Archives needed more shelf space for other materials. They kept the microfilms and returned the originals.

Today all this documentary evidence is preserved in our National Library by Director Prudenciana Cruz. It is reflective of our reinterpretation of history that this collection, formerly called the "Philippine Insurgent Records," has been renamed the "Philippine Revolutionary Papers."

While we should be glad to have the original manuscripts of our heroes in the Philippines, researchers sometimes have difficulty locating items that have been lost, stolen or misfiled over time and so we always resort to the US-made microfilm that comes with a useful index. Maybe when the Philippines has a better economy, we can have a similar center that will make important Philippine documents accessible to the people, both Pilipinos and foreigners, on the Internet.

During the meeting, a demonstration of JACAHR online was presented, and it made my heart sink with envy. There was a search engine that could find materials under certain key words. Often an image of the original document came out and could be read, downloaded or printed out free of charge. Maturally, we asked to search under "Laurel" and I was surprised to find a reference to him and a "puppet government" in the Philippines. I asked if this heading or key word was found in the original, I was told that some of the terms were supplied by the Americans, thus reflecting their view or their interpretation of Philippine history.

I have always been wary of the terms "pupper government" and "collaborator" which are used mindlessly in our school textbooks, despite the unsettled debate on whether the "collaboration" with Japan in those dark days was done out of conviction or necessity. As you can see, documents by themselves say something, but the editorializing and interpretation come from the historian

When we asked to see the records on the "comfort women," we were surprised to find very little material. Dr. Rico Jose, the authority on the Japanese persod in our history, said that there was a lot of material available in the archives, but this was not reflected in the JACAHR website. Perhaps we were not asking the correct keywords? For example, the entries important to Filipino historians are listed under the heading "philippine" which is a transliteration of the Japanese word for our country, if you make the "mistake" of entering a search under "Philippines" with an "r", you will probably be told no records exist on this topic.

When I remarked on this, I was told that the search words were determined by archivists, not by historians, and that JACAHR would welcome our suggestions. I guess no archival system, no matter how wellfunded and sophisticated, can be perfect but then this is much better than anything we have at the moment. It makes Flipino historians dream of a time when we can access Philippine records on the Net whether these be held in Manila, Washington, Madrid or Tokyo.

The world is indeed becoming a smaller place because of the Internet. We can only hope that more people will use what is available to study the past and gain perspective for the present and

As the overseer of globalization in our country, Ms Arroyo, together with her family (including a grandchild and her yaya), went on a pilgrimage to Bening last year to invite China to invest in the Philippines. As a result, China is now building the controversial NorthRail project. Chinese mining concerns are now busy prospecting for minerals here, especially oil in the Spratlys.

In other words, while the Arroyo administration is on a noisy anti-communist witch-hunt, it is at the same time earnestly begging Beijing, the capital of the world's largest communist country, to help breathe life into our economy. How can Ms Arroyo go on a witch-hunt for local communists while increasingly depending on the communist regime in China for investments?

Cory's secure legacy

DURING THE WREATH-LAYING CEREMONY in Makati last Feb. 24, Ms Corazon Aquino said she neither claims to be an icon of People Power nor thinks of herself as one. Instead, she said, all of us, Filipinos, are icons of People Power 1 beg to disagree with her.

If there is one enduring symbol of People Power, it is Cory

People Power was a glorious moment for Filipinos. From there, Ms Aquino emerged as the darling of the international community and the world press and, most of all, our President and national pride

But shortly thereafter, people sought to unseat her She refused to be cowed into submission and valiantly defied the threats. In the end, she kept her seat and finished her term, but at great cost to our nation. Soldiers died and, perhaps, thousands of ordinary citizens also died of poverty, the indirect result of the economic crists made worse by the combination of bloody coup attempts, a power crisis and a faned agrarian reform program.

The Aquino presidency may not have been a great one. The change that everybody was expecting did not come. In short, we were distilustoned. It was a rude awakening for most of us, but we stuck by our President She was not bulhed into making the extreme sacrifice of resigning just to appease those who opposed her. She served a transitory purpose and we knew how important it was that she finish her term. It would have been disastrous for democracy if she did not finish it. We could have failen into

What I do not understand is why Ms Aquino can't give Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo the same support; why she is allowing herself to be used by the same people who tried to unseat her; and why she is now associating herself with a former president who, five years ago, she thought was not fit to be president. And I wonder after President Arroyo is gone, would Ms Aquino also regret having demanded the former's resignation and then join hands with her to seek the ouster of the succeeding president? So, when will this madness end? And when can we finally move forward?

Ms Aquino should examine her ways. They may have worked wonders in 1986, but are they the right things to do now?

What we need are new .deas, new ways to effect change. People Power worked great 20 years ago But as we have seen in 2001, a secand People Power weakened our democratic institutions. Doing it a third (or some may argue, a fourth) time might just throw our country into chaos.

People saw the irony on the 20th anniversary of Edsa I when Pilipinos could not assemble freely and a state of emergency was declared I think the greatest irony that day was Ms Aquino, the .con of People Power, willing to gamble the gains of People Power by aligning herself with power-hungry people.

Ms Aquino will forever be our People Power President. Her legacy is secure. She shouldn't mess with it.

No interest in rising prices

MANUEL ALMARIO IS WRONG IN SAYING that because of the value added tax, the government has a vested interest in rising prices. (PDI, 2/28/06) He explains, "the higher the prices are of gasoline, cooking gas, electricity, water, food and services, the more taxes a collects. And the VAT is paid by the ultimate consumer."

It is true that when the price of a product increases, the government gets to collect more taxes on that product. However, higher prices can also lead to consumers buying less (assuming that the consumers are price sensitive). Therefore, the tax gains expected from higher prices may be offset by less sales. In short, rising prices will not increase VAT collection and may even reduce it.

Consider also that the poor typically do not engage in "discretionary spending." The poor will always spend the same amount regardless of the price of goods. Therefore, VAT collection from the poor will not be affected by the price of goods. On the other hand, the rich bend toward discretionary spending. The amount they spend depends on the price of goods. The lower the price, the more they buy; and the higher the price, the sess they buy,

Therefore, there is no benefit when prices rise, while there is everything to gain when they fall

One last note, rising prices result in inflation. High inflation is not good for the economy and is felt mostly by the poor. As such, there is no reason for the government to want rising prices.

Guling-Guling' teaches youth traditions, values

By Cristina Arzadon Papery, Ilocos Norte

T WAS NO ORDINARY DAY FOR RESIDENTS OF PAOAY, ILOCOS Norte, on Feb. 28. After all, it was the last day of merrymaking before the Catholic faithful entered the Lenten season of sacrifice.

The people usually take to the streets, enjoying the last day of earthly pleasures, before the 40-day observance of the digging of three holes, locally known Jesus Christ's sacrifice starts.

The Guling-Guang Festival, DAYTOY Ti traditionally held the day before Ash Wednesday when AMIANAN Gatholics officially mark fasting and penitence, is a day of merrymak- tract), which would turn to molasses ing and street dancing for Paoay folk.

For Placida Cacayorin, 88, the festival is also a time when the elderly can infuse the values of tradition with the young. 5"We take pride in our culture and we want the young to continue this tradition while we reach the sunset of our lives," Cacayoria said.

5 "Guling-guling" means to smear on one's forehead the Sign of the Cross, using ashes from burnt leaves. Instead of lining before a priest, however, Pacay villagers receive the imprint made from a wet, white rice flour called the "bellingy" from the town mayor.

Former Councilor Eisenhower Adaza got up earlier than usual and supervised

3-chamber oven

The oven has three chambers—firewood is fed in one, a large cooking pan (locally known as the "siliasi") is heated in the middle, and the vent is the last.

This was how our forebears cooked in the olden days. This is also an opportunity to show our children how it was in the beginning," Adaza said.

Paoay remains an agricultural town. Sugarcane farming continues to create livelihood among residents. Sugarcane section and ended at the plaza.

Adaza's house was among seven designated areas where the "dudof" (local version of the maja blance) was prepared. The dudol, made of sugarcane extract, encount milk and rice, is normally given to the festival crowd.

It took four hours for Adaza and three others to cook a large pan of the dudol. Cooking the native cake demands constant stirring once the mix starts to boil, to prevent it from being overcooked or burned.

town's symbol of paying homage to farmers and the beast of burden for their contributton to food production and rural development. "Many of our farmers have abandoned the fields because of the rising costs of farm inputs. This is our tribute to those who continue to tall the earth," he said,

Cycling champ pedals to fish farming

By Ben Moses Ebreo Bagabag, Nueva Viscaya

IS FIRST LOVE came during his struggling days of cycling, but he landed on second love-fish

At the peak of his cycling career, Lupo Alava, 47, never thought of being in the fishpond ss although he was a graduate of agriculture, raising tilapia and supplying people in Nueva Vizcaya with nutritious products.

Alava, the Rookie of the Year in the 1980 Marlboro Tour ng Pilipmas, participated in the annual cycling series from 1980 to 1985, and gained popularity nationwide. 4 He left the rigorous cycling event in 1985, got married and decided to develop a 1,000-som lot at Sitio Baute in Barangay Namamparan, Diadi town, upon his wife's advice. The couple has three children.

Tr is where I got an interest and encouragement in fish farming because I have been observing that (it is) ... more profitable than other kinds of farming," he said Alava, however, has kept a symbol of his career in putting up a bike shop named after him in Dradi.

Fish kill

Starting a fishpond venture was not easy. He experienced a fish kill due to overstocking, forcing him to attend seminars and trainings conducted by local fishery experts.

His first harvest convinced him to concentrate on the business. Slowly, he developed his mann farm from another lot be inherited from his grandparents in 2003 in Barangay Villa Coloma in Diadi.

The five-hectare, irrigation-fed fish farm also has a small impounding area that serves nearby rice fields owned by other villagers. It has eight ponds with a size of 23,350 sum each.

Alava harvests fish in four to five months. At most, his yield is eight tons per pond which he sells at a faringate price of P58 a kilo.

"Fish farming is good. I even spend more hours here than in my bicycle center business. My full attention is here," he said.

Being the largest produces of tilapia in the province, Alava is now developing a fish hatchery. Most fish farmers get their fish supply from the Science City of Muñoz in Nueva Ecija and in Isabela, he noted.

Love for cycling

Alava said his love for cycling remained. Every weekend, he spends time on the road from Bagabag town in Nueva Vizcaya to Lagawe town in Ifugao or to Sannago City in Isabeia.

He founded cycling and mountain biling clubs in Diadi to help and support local enthusiasts, along with other cycling sensations Domingo Quilban (now a retired police officer), Ariel Maraña, (who is based in the United States) and Carlo Guieb (manager of a jeepney business).

Alava has outlets for his fish products in Villaverde, Solano, Bayombong, Bambang and his hometown Bagabag in Nueva Vizcaya, Lamut town in Ifugao, and Santiago.

Many people want to go into fish farming but heg capital is needed since it entails expenditures from pond preparation and management, he said.

Depending on the size of the eight bags of feeds per 1,000 fingerlings for the whole season Alava said he was spending P5,000 daily for feeds. He employs six workers and hires seven others for distribution. Officials of the provincial agriponds, a farmer uses up at least culture office said Alava's fish products have improved the local fish sufficiency level by 15 percent.

> Last year, Alava was named outstanding fisherman (fish category) by the Gawad-Saka Awards search for outstanding agricultur

Onion prices high, but farmers lack supply The reports indicated that the to- went down and they spent more,

CABANATUAN CITY-THE CURresix farm gate price of onions ranges from P30 to P35 a kilogram, which farmers considered to be high.

In the past, the price ranged from P4 to P8 a kg at this time of the year. Farmers said the buying price of P8 a kg is considered good as producers can already earn enough from this price.

But the problem is that local omon farmers do not have enough onion bulbs to sell this harvest season as rains and flash floods during the last week of January destroyed their crops.

Validation and data collection reports received by provincial agriculturnst Serafin Santos showed that of the more than 10,000 hectares planted with onion this cropping season, only 6,282 hectares remained with standing crops after the rains and floods early this year.

A few days after the devastation, crop experts said the usual good harvest could not be expected because the surviving plants were weakened.

tal production output would only reach about 62,000 metric tons of onions of the yellow grannex, red creale and "tanduyong" varieties.

This estimated volume is not event half of the usual 140,000 to 170,000 metric tons of harvest in Nueva Ecija during good weather, farmers and agriculture officials said.

Onion farmers contacted by the Inouner said their margin of profit was small even at the current farm gate prices because their output

During good weather, farmers usually spend P65,000 to P70,000 per hectare for farm inputs and labor costs.

LUCENA CITY-THE DEPARTMENT of Public Works and Highways has finally admitted that the New People's Army's imposition of revolutionary taxes on road contractors has further delayed the completion of a P616million road project in Quezon.

Engineer Vizgilio Castillo, DPWH official assigned to the project, made the admission before an inquiry of the provincial council on Monday on the delay of the road project initiated by Quezon Rep. Rafaei Nantes way back in 1998 during the term of former President Estrada.

The proposed 54.5 km circumferential road project, initially valued at P616 million, will pass through the towns of Luchan, Tayabas, Mauban and Sampaloc.

Castillo said the first contractor, China Harbour Engineering Company, one of the biggest Chinese-owned construction firms. backed out of the project due to the "peace and order" problem and delayed payment for the completed portion of the project.

"Based on the report that we received, the contractor cited as main reason the peace and order problem," Castillo explained.

He said the next contractor, Makati Development Corp., also cited the same problems when it decided not to finish the project. Speaking on condition of anonymity, one of the DPWH officials present admitted to the begutaen that the NPA's imposition of the revolutionary tax had forced the two contractors to give up the projects. The NPA demand was too high and the threat of destruction of heavy equipments plus the safety of the personnel is not guaranteed, no contractor will surely stay to finish the project," the informant said.

However, Representative Nantes denied that the rebel's imposition of the revolutionary tax was the main reason for the delay on the completion of the circumferential road project. Delfin Mallari Jr. PDI Southern Luson Bu-

DAR prepares to take over co-op property over P17-M loan

By Juan Escandor Jr. PDI Southern Luzon Bureau

BULA, CAMARINES SUR-THE Department of Agrarian Reform is preparing to take over a 460hectare property of an agrarian reform community that has been organized into a cooperative, according to a government

Ramon SG. Cabañes Jr., DAR-Camarines Sur legal division chief, said the Pecuaria Development Cooperative Inc. (PDCI), composed of more than 100 farming families, would be forced to turn over the contested property to the government once the court lifted the temporary restraining order (TRO) on foreclosure proceedings that should have been completed in December last year.

Failed to pay

Cabañes said the PDCI failed to pay the Development Bank of the Philippines (DBP) a P3-million debt acquired on May 17, 1993. The amount has ballooned to P17 million

The loan was taken from the DAR's Special Projects Agro-Industrial Area Funds channeled through the DBP

Cabañes said foreclosure proceedings on the PDCI property had been stalled because of a court order that the cooperative obtained on Dec. 27, 2005, a day before the scheduled auction

Pollowing the issuance of the TRO, the PDCI, through its counsel Gina Ballebar, countered by filing a civil case against the DAR and the DBP that sought to annul the deed of assignment.

Court records showed that pending in court

the PDCI argued that it could not be made to pay the DBP loan because the transaction was entered into by a group called the People's Coalition for Unity and Agrarian Reform Program (Pecuaria) and not by

The Mass was attended by hundreds of priests from different dioceses in the country, including Manila Archbishop Gaudencio Cardinal Rosales and Catholic Bishops Conference of the Philippines (CBCP) president Bishop Angel Lagdameo of Boilo.

Vidal said he did not know until when he would continue to head the Cebu Archdiocese. But Msgr. Esteban Binghay, the Cebu Arch-

Donations keep coming in for Guinsaugon

By Jani Arnaiz PDI Visayas Bureau

MAASIN CITY-DONATIONS CONtinued to pour in for victims of the Guinsaugon landslide, which left over 1,000 people dead, nearly a month since it happened.

Most of the donations are in kind, particularly housing units for the survivors and evacuees from other villages considered geologically hazardous by the Mines and Geosciences Bureau.

Other donations are in the form of scholarships for the surviving minors, said Southern Leyte Gov. Rosette Lerias.

The governor said the province also received cash donations amounting to P5.2 million and $20,360. She said the $20,000 cash donated by the Korean Church Relief Team (KCRT) had been set aside for housing units for the survivors. The group, she said, wanted the amount used solely for the construction of about 30 houses.

"We have been transparent in our dealings with the donations. Anyone can look into it because all were receipted. The donors would not have trusted us if we have been remiss with it," said Lenas in reaction to quenes about the donations.

She said only 350 housing units were needed for the survivors. "But with the donations that are pouring m, we can build at least 1,000 units for the evacuees from other baranguys."

The other evacuees came from Guinsaugon's neighboring villages of Hinabian, Magatas, Sugangon, Ayahag, and Nueva Es-peranza. Local officials have asked residents living along the slopes of these barangays to leave as they were also at risk of becoming victims of landslides, particularly because Mt. Kan-abag had remained unstable.

"If the donations from benevolent donors keep overflowing, there is a chance that other landslide-threatened municipalities in the province, like Liloan, San Francisco, Bontoc, Sogod and Macrohon, even Maasin City, would benefit from these donations," Lenas said.

She added that "Oplan Kinabukasan," which was launched ast week to monitor the victims' rehabilitation, would coordinate with St. Bernard's 'Tabang St. Bernard," in undertaking the housing project.

said a 5.7 hectare lot had been acquired in Barangay Magbagakay for P3 million, which came from cash donations.

Legarda said the latest exposés about election officials prefabricating election returns could explain Vice President Noli de Castro's 2 percent (800,080 votes) lead in the 2004 count and might well allow her to claim the vice presidential post.

But she said she did not know what kind of working relationship she would have with President Macapagal-Arroyo, whom she accused of cheating alongside De Castro.

"That's a difficult question. Maybe I shouldn't answer you ... I will work with legitimately elected presidents," she said.

The Supreme Court has been deliberating en banc as the Presidential Electoral Tribunal on alleged fraud committed by De Castro's camp during the 2004

1,000 flee homes to escape AFP-NPA clashes in Samar

By Joey A. Gabieta PDI Visayas Bureau

TACLOBAN CITY-MILITARY OPERAtions against communist New People's Army (NPA) rebels in the past two weeks have sent over 1,000 people fleeing from their homes in at least four hinterland villages in Samar province, a nongovernment group based here reported.

Clashes and NPA attacks were also reported yesterday in Zamboanga del Norte, Misamis Occidental and Batzan.

Jasmin Jerusalem, executive director of the Leyte Center for Development, said 98 families or 588 people from three farming villages in Motiong, Samar, had sought refuge in a public elementary gay Calapi, 17 km from the town center.

in the nearby town of San Jose de Buan, about 100 families or 600 individuals from Barangay Hagbay are now housed at the municipal hall, Jerusalem said.

Military authorities have identified Motiong and San Jose de Buan as among the "hotbeds" of communist insurgency

The Inquire yesterday tried to reach Maj. Gen. Bonifacio Ramos, head of the Army's 8th Infantry Division based in Catbalogan, Samar, to verify the development agency's report. He did not respond to mobile phone calls and text messages.

Jerusalem said her group on Tuesday conducted food relief operations for the evacuees. In Motiong, 37 families or 222 persons left their homes in Barangay San Andres: 31 families or 186 persons in Biri, and 30 families or 180 persons in Soldiers of the Army's 34th Infantry Battalion led by Col. Glorvida Dida and based in San Jorge town, also in Samar, have been conducting counterinsurgency operations in these villages, she said.

The people are afraid to return to their villages for fear of their lives. They could not resume their daily and normal activities of the Central Command based in Cebu for fear that they will be affected by the on-school and in relatives' homes in Baran- City, also failed to answer mobile phone going military operations by the military," Jerusalem told the INQUIRER.

"While we cannot really deny that there is armed conflict going on in the two towns, operations conducted by the military must be done in such a way that civilians will not be affected or disturbed," she added.

Earlier, about 2,000 people fled the villages of Trojillo, J.E. Santus, Kalantiao, E. Duran and Santander in Bobon town. Northern Samar, on March 6 for fear of being caught in the crossfire between government soldiers and NPA members. They stayed at the mumcipal hall.

that security forces were behind the wave of attacks around the country that have killed more than 100 activists or their relatives since 2001.

Malacafiang pledged to act on the

"There is a standing order for the (police) to act on these killings of militant leaders and to identify and arrest the culprits," Press Secretary Ignacio Burnye said. "We cannot allow this murder trend to undermine peace and order. We assure the families of the victims that no stone will be left unturned in the conduct of the probes."

The critically wounded Amante Abelen, coordinator for Anakpawis in Zambales, did not give any names but said one of the gunmen was "familiar" to him, according to initial investigation.

Abelon, 40, gave the information to investigators before he was wheeled into the operating room shortly after the attack on Monday, two sources in the ponce force told the INQUIRER.

Abelon's wife, Agnes, and 5-year-old son were killed when gunmen opened fire while the Abelons were riding on a motorcycle in Castillejos town

Abelon, a barangay councilman in the Zambales town of San Marcelino and vice chair of the Alyansa ng Magbubukid sa Gitnang Luzon (AMGL) provincial chapter, was described by doctors as being in stable condition.

He is being treated at the James L. Gordon Memorial Hospital in Olongapo City Dr. Armando Cepeda said Abelon was not completely out of danger as he had sustained at least 14 bullet wounds, one of them in the chest.

Abelon was among the latest victims of the attacks on militants. On Sunday, Bicol University student Cris Hugo was shot dead in Legazpi City in Albay while walking home with a professor.

Several policemen are guarding Abelon in the hospital to preempt any attempt by his attackers to firush him off, officials said.

Lt. Col. Pelipe Anotado, commander of tions left and right." the Army's 24th Infantry Battalion, said be would investigate allegations that soldiers could have been unvolved in the attack.

Anotado said his troops in Zambales were based only in Palauig town. Others were stationed in Bataan and a few in Bulacan, he said.

AMGL chair Joseph Canlas said his group suspected the military, specifically soldiers under Maj. Gen. Jovito Palparan Jr., of being behind the incident.

"This is the handiwork of the men of General Palparan. We could not think of anyone who has the motive to single out leaders and members of Analopawis, AMGL and other progressive organizations for liquidation," Cantas said on the phone.

Anakpawis Rep. Rafael Mariano gave reporters a purported military "Order of Battle" against the Left to show that the administration was on the warpath.

Besides Mariano, on the supposed list were Kilusan ng Magbubukid ng Pilipinas leaders Danilo Ramos and Randal Echanis. It also named Anakpawis and Bayan Muna leaders Dominador Malicay, Antonio Flores, Siegfred Deduro, Richard Sarozza, Julius Mariveles and Joey Javier.

The attack on the Abelons brought to 20 the number of victims of extrajudicial killings in Central Luzon from January to March 20 this year, the AMGL said.

An Armed Forces spokesperson said the military had anticipated they would be blamed for the attacks.

"It is normal. Every time something happens to militant leftists the blame is put on the military," AFP spokesperson Brig. Gen. Jose Honrado said.

But (we've said) over and over again, if (they) have the proof, bring them to court and the Armed Forces hierarchy is more than willing to let that soldier face the full force of the law," Horrado said.

"What I would like to suggest is, let the police do their job. Let them investigate [first] rather than throw accusa-

The controversial Palparan has said he does not need to show evidence to prove links between the New People's Army and some leftist groups.

Last November, he and Army chief Lt. Gen. Hermogenes Esperon told reporters they believed Bayan Muna party-list Representatives Satur Ocampo and Teodoro Casmo and a provincial Bayan Muna official were supporters of the Communist Party and the NPA.

Palparan said at the time that he was not after building a legal case against the three Bayan Muna officials.

Strong links

The evidence may not be enough. But we have to put out the information to the public," Palparan said, adding that filing court cases would only take time.

"As far as we're concerned, yes, there's a strong connection between Bayan Muna and other militant organizations to the underground movement. You can see the relationship even if they deny (it)," he said.

Palparan has been defended by the military leadership against allegations his men were involved in atrocates. The other day, he received the Distinguished Service Star. the highest military administrative award.

"So far, we can say that their statements have no factual basis," PNP spokesperson Serior Supt. Samuel Pagdilao said, referring to the allegations of the militants. "If they have proof, they should turn it over to the police and help us."

"Aren't they also capable of doing it to their own people?" Pagdilao added. referring to the killing of hundreds of cadres suspected of being spies during the communist purge of the 1980s.

Search for missing

Unfazed by the continuing violence, a team from the Association of Major Religious Superiors of the Philippines and four Church-related institutions has launched a search in Aurora province for Joey Estriber, a missing social worker.

Estriber, a program officer of Bataris (Bahay Talakayan para sa Rekonstruksyon at Ikauunlad ng Sambayanan) and secretary general of the Multi-Sectoral Action Group of Aurora, was abducted on March 3.

Estriber anchored a radio program on the environment.

The Church mission will also look into the reported growing military presence in Aurora.

in Bohol, militant farmers called for the pullout of the military detachment of the 15th Infantry Battalion.

Farmers belonging to the Hugpong sa mga Mag-uumang Bol-anon suspected the military was responsible for the killing of peasant leader Nestor Aranqui in Bohol on March 7

Teddy Casiño and Satur Ocampo that they were part of a meeting where Ms Arroyo allegedly talked with five generals a year before Edsa II, the people power revolt that ousted Estrada in January 2001.

The party-list representatives disclosed this detail as police have sought to arrest them for allegedly conniving with military officers in the aborted Feb. 24 coup. Bunye did not address this charge in the statement.

Instead, Bunye pointed out the President's efforts in forging a peace pact to end the communist insurgency.

"She even launched peace negotiations with the NDF (National Democratic Front) in a bid to reconcile with the revolutionary Left, to no avail. They were never serious for peace," Bunye said.

"Now, the ade has completely changed," he

Peace taiks have been suspended partly as a result of the inclusion of the Communist Party of the Philippines and the New People's Army in the list of terrorist organizations being monitored by the US and European governments.

Presidential Chief of Staff Michael Defensor scoffed at the party-list representatives' insistence that Ms Arroyo could be held liable for rebellion for conspiring with them to oust

At that time, Ms Arroyo was Vice President while Estrada was on trial in the Senate on charges of bribery, corruption, betrayal of the public trust and culpable violation of the Con-

Legal move

But Defensor said Ms Arroyo back then was engaged in a "legal" move and her actions were "within the democratic space" and were done "alongside with several civil society organizations."

"It's different from the armed takeover being hatched by the Left and Right," he said.

Defensor said Edsa II was "different from what is transpiring now."

"Edsa II was a people-led revolution. The people were there first and later on the Armed Porces of the Philippines came in, not as individual generals but the entire institution, saying that we are withdrawing support from Erap," he said.

"Now, you see the military leading the campaign for a military takeover and wanting a civilian component to join them to complete the formula or ingredient of a coup d'etat or a military uprising," Defensor said.

Not sleeping with enemy

Like Defensor, Rep. Antonio Cuenco (Lakas-CMD, Cebu City) defended Ms Arroyo, saying she did not sleep with the enemy when she talked to leftist leaders in 2000.

"She was making consultations, That doesn't spell conspiracy but tells about a vice president doing her duty to consult with all sectors for any eventuality," Cuenco said.

Cuenco, chair of the House committee on foreign affairs, downplayed efforts by militant lawmakers to link Ms Arroyo to the movement to oust Estrada.

He said the photos presented Monday to the media by Ocampo showing Ms Arroyo with him and other militant leaders at the height of the protests calling for Estrada's ouster "provide no basis for the conspiracy story they are now trying desperately to raise against the President."

in one of the photos taken on Nov. 16, 2000, at St. Theresa's College in Quezon City, the then Vice President was seated between Ocampo and Crispin Beltran, now Anakpawis representative and one of the six party-list lawmakers charged with rebellion by the Arroyo administration.

Linking arms with Beltran

In the other photo, against a red backdrop emblazoned with the word "Oust," she had linked arms with Beltran, then Kilusang Mayo Uno chair, and other KMU leaders during a separate dialogue between her and the Workers' Alliance Against Erap (WAGE)

Ocampo had said that the then Vice President had agreed to support the 20-point agenda under a post-Estrada scenario, with Ms Arroyo as the constitutional successor.

But there was no mention of any statement quoting Ms Arroyo as urging the militant groups to oust Estrada, Cuenco said.

"Satur himself said the meeting was to formulate a reform agenda to be implemented in case Erap (Estrada) is removed from office," said Cuenco.

"It was not her fault that she had to take over from Estrada after he stepped down from office since that was part of her constitutional mandate. How can that be considered rebellion?" the lawmaker said. Reports from Gil C. Cabacungan Jr., Christine O. Avendaño and Michael Lim Ubac

Erap confirms US notice of bugging

OUSTED PRESIDENT JOSEPH ESTRADA said yesterday he has been notified by an American court that US authorities had bugged his telephone conversations with a former FBI analyst charged with illegally revealing US government secrets.

Estrada has previously acknowledged receiving American government assessments of Philippine political events from Leandro Aragoncillo, who has been accused of illegally downloading confidential US information and passing it to other people while working as an FBI intelligence analyst.

Estrada told The Associated Press he has received a notice from a New Jersey court, which informed him that some of his telephone conversations with Aragoncillo had been wiretapped by US authorities.

The notice indicated that the wiretapping, done in the course of investigating Aragoncillo, was authorized by the New Jersey court, Estrada said. There was no indication that he was being investigated by US authorities, he added.

"The notice said that my telephone calls with Aragoncillo were wire-tapped," Estrada said in a telephone interview. "The wiretapping was authorized by the court."

Michael Drewniak, spokesman for the US Attorney's Office in Newark, New Jersey, has refused to comment on wiretapping, which was first reported by the INQUIRER.

"Even if that were so, I would not comment on it," he said last week.

Aragoncillo, a 21-year Marine veteran who became an FBI intelligence analyst in 2004, was arrested in the US last year. He has been charged with conspiring to reveal government secrets, acting as a foreign agent and improperly using FBI computers. Those charges carry a maximum sentence of 25 years.

He has not been charged with espionage, which carries a maximum penalty of capital punishment.

Estrada was toppled on charges of corruption in 2001 and has been on trial since then. He was scheduled to take the witness stand today.

He has acknowledged conversing with Aragoncillo by telephone and receiving US government documents on the positical situation in the Philippines, but he prayed down their value, saying the assessments were similar to those reported by Philippine newspapers.

Asked if he felt offended by the US action, Estrada rephed: "My reaction is nothing, because even before this, I have admitted that I've talked with him ... (and) that those details were nothing more than newspaper accounts of what's happening in the country."

Estrada said he met Aragoncillo when he visited the United States while he was still President and was introduced to him and other White House staffers of Filipino descent. Their friendship blossomed, with Aragoncillo visiting him at Malacañang and the military hospital where he was previously detained. AP

Why the silence? PCGG asked

MAVERICK ADMINISTRATION SEN. JOKER AR royo yesterday scored the "ominous silence" of the Presidential Commission on Good Government (PCGG) over the plan of businessman Eduardo "Danding" Cojuangco. Jr. to sel. P6 billion worth of contested San Miguel Corp. "B" shares.

"Why is the PCGG ominously silent about the move of Ambassador Cojuangco for permission to sell 73 million San Miguei shares that is claimed by the government?" Arroyo said in a statement.

Arroyo said the PCGG should immediately oppose Cojuangeo's petition before the Sandiganbayan to sel. 73 million SMC shares to pay off the loans incurred by 14 coco-levy funded companies.

The anti-graft court has set a hearing on the case tomorrow. The 73 million shares represent 13.33 percent of the 550 million SMC shares held by companies that the government, through the PCGG, sequestered in 1986 and 1987

"PCGG cannot allow this motion to go unchallenged. Why should San Miguel shares that is being claimed by the government be used to pay off the P6-billion toans of coco-levy corporations?" Arroyo said.

Nine of the coco levy-funded companies owe P5.34 billion in loans to the United Coconut Planters Bank. Philip C. Tubeza

Man killed in Quiapo drug bust

By Margaux C. Ortiz

MANILA POLICEMEN UNCOVERED A flourishing drug den in the middle of a depressed community in Quiapo, Manila, early yesterday morning, and killed a suspect who tried to escape

The police said they seized P7.5 milbon worth of shabu and arrested six persons inside the two-story house at 14 Fraternal Street.

Supt. Romulo Sapitula, Manda Police District (MPD) Station 3 chief, said his men had to use acetylene torches in breaking down the two steel doors protecting the small alley which led to the street where the alleged drug den was located.

A surveillance camera had been installed above one of the doors, allowing the drug dealers to spot possible police operatives attempting to conduct a raid in the area, Sapitula added.

Police were able to seize three kilos of suspected methamphetamine hydrochloride or shabu with an estimated street value of P7.5 million during the raid.

They also arrested six persons they found inside the house. Jennylyn De Leon, 26; Pilar Espinofella, 72; Rosalinda Rosello, 36; Amado Cortez Jr., 49, Jaime Maglapit, 38, and Angelito dela Cruz, 49, all of Quapo, Manila, now face drug charges.

A seventh suspect, 22-year-old Jessie Lloyd Salgado, was shot to death after allegedly engaging the policemen in a

"The area is notorious for its drug activities," Sapitula said, adding that two MPD operatives were killed during an operation in the area many years ago.

Armed with a search warrant, the pobecemen conducted the raid at 4:30 a.m. Sapitula said three suspects, including Saigado, were able to leave the house while the MPD operatives were breakang down the doors.

MPD director Chief Supt. Pedro Bulaong and Manda Mayor Lito Attenza

later inspected the house after the raid. It was during this time that Sapitula noticed that one of the rooms on the first floor was locked.

When responding policemen broke down the door, they saw two other unidentified suspects and Salgado, who had apparently gone back to the house.

Thinking that the police had already left, the suspects jumped out of the window and quickly boarded a boat docked in a nearby creek.

Policemen ran after the three, and killed Salgado in a shootout that followed, Sapitula said. "We are now tracing the whereabouts of the other suspects," the police official added.

No arrest without mission order from BI

By Leila B. Salaverria

THE BUREAU OF IMMIGRATION (BI) cannot arrest just any foreigner believed to be engaged in a prohibited ventures like smallscale lending businesses without a mission order from the immigration commissioner.

, And before Bl intelligence opgrattves can get a mission order, they have to verify a formal complaint against a foreigner or validate ups from informants.

Farzal Hussin, the bureau's intelingence chief, yesterday said that BI operatives also conduct their own monitoring and data gathering on aliens' illegal activities, after which the operatives would be used as a basis for the mission order.

"We can't just go arresting any foreigner. We can't move against people without a mission order," Hussin said in a phone interview. "We have to follow a process because otherwise, we would be the one subjected to many compiaints."

Hussin made the statements when asked about the bureau's response to reports that foreigners have been engaging in the "5-6" lending business, wherein the borrowers, usually Filipinos, are charged higher than the usual interest rates.

He added that the Bl does not submit an intelligence report that allow its operatives to conduct arrests based on their own information without first getting a mission order from the commissioner to ensure that their actions would be abovehoard.

"That could be abused if we allow everybody to do that," Hussin

Earlier, Bi executive director Roy Almoro said engaging in retail trade reserved for Filipmos could be a ground for deportation among foreigners.

He added that aliens must follow the requirements of the Retail Trade Liberalization Act, which prescribes the capital requirement

"All the unions are calling to make March 28 a day of demonstrations, strikes and work stoppages," said Rene Valadon, confederal secretary of the Force Ouvnere umon after a meeting of France's main unions, student and high school groups.

The large public sector was expected to join the one-day stoppage in force but it was not immediately clear how the strike would affect the nrivate sector.

Despite nationwide protest marches over the weekend, Prime Minister Dominique de Viliepin has stood firm on the First Job Contract (CPE) law but also called for dialogue to improve it.

Australia starts cyclone cleanup

AUSTRALIA AUSTRALIA'S northeast coast picked up the pieces on Tuesday after a cyclone with winds topping 290 kph ripped roofs off homes, decimated the nation's sugar and banana crops and uprooted trees.

Astonishingly, there were no deaths and only some minor injuries as Cyclone Larry, one of Australia's most powerful cyclones, left a trail of destruction along 300 km of coast south of the tourist center of Caurus on Monday morning

The maximum category five storm may have cut raw sugar production by the world's thirdlargest exporter by 500,000 tons, or 10 percent, while about 90 percent of Australia's banana production was also believed to have been wiped out, industry groups said.

But as emergency services, troops and local communities surveyed the damage from Larry, another storm, Cyclone Wari, was brewing about 1,000 km east of Cairns at category two strength, Australia's Tropical Cyclone Warning Center said.

"It is moving towards the west at 20 lph and should gradually intensify over the next 24 hours. Wati is expected to maintain this track until Wednesday morning when it will slow down and remain in offshore waters for the rest of the week," the center said on its website, www.born.gov.au.

Queensland state Premier Peter Beattle said the recovery from Monday's cyclone would be where the "long and slow" and that it would take time to restore basic services. Hundreds of tarpaulins were being delivered to affected areas to make homes

BAP reinstatement not an option—POC

By Jasmine W. Payo

THE BASKETBALL ASSOCIAtion of the Philippines' demand for reinstatement is an "old issue being rehashed" and the Philippine Olympic Committee insists it isn't going to give in.

The reaction came yesterday on the heels of the BAP announcement Monday that it will file a case against the local Olympic body in the Court of Arbitration for Sport (CAS) this

The POC expelled the BAP June last year. In a statement released yesterday, the BAP claimed that its bid to regain membership is an issue the POC hasn't dealt with for months.

Coca-Cola Ginebra (San Miguel) · Alaska Red Bull Purefoods Talk N Text Sta Lucia Air21

BAMES TODAY (Aranela Collegum) 4:40 p.m.—Red Bull vs Sta. Lucia Realty 7:35 p.m. - Pureloods vs Barangay Ginebra

Resurgent Bulls battle Realtors

RED BUILL AND STA, LUCIA REALTY HOPE TO build on recent victories while Barangay Ginebra and Purefoods eye a rebound in the Gran Matador Brandy-PBA Philippine Cup today at the Araneta Coliseum.

Champions in the Fiesta Cup last conference, the Bulls shook off the cobwebs that led to a conference-opening defeat to the San Miguel Beermen and defeated the Alaska Aces with their trademark running attack.

"That loss against San Miguel was a wake-up call for us," said Red Bull coach Yeng Guiao. "If we want to be contenders in this conference, we must beat teams at their best."

The Realtors also woke up from a short slumber and named back the Air21 Express to begin their climb out of a 0-2 pit. Dennis Espino and Marlou Aguino were both fired up in that victory, with Aquino making up for a lack of fire in setbacks against Purefoods and Barangay Ginebra.

"We've been developing a new system and if you noticed, the team is now more inclined to run the breaks than rely on deliberate play," said Sta. Lucia coach Alfrancis Chua. "Actually, we're not really looking to win. I just rell them to anprove every game and victories will follow."

Enrico Villamieva, Mick Pennisi and EJ Peihl are being eyed to anchor a defense that the team hopes will fuel its fast-paced offensive flow.

"We want to put energy on a consistent manner, defense-wise," said Guiao, whose Bulls are coming off a week's break after beating Alaska. "On the offensive end, we're more comfortable with the uptempo brand of play."

Guiao added. "That one-week break was good for us. We should relish it because my players are aiready spent after winning the championship."

In contrast, the Giants will be playing their third game in a week that included a trip to Hong Kong. Purefoods has lost two in a row, one to the Coca-Cola Tigers and the other to the Talk 'N Text Phone Pals during the league's first overseas

Kerby Raymundo was his usual fiery self and battled the brusque Talk 'N Text froatline with success before a sellout crowd of overseas Filipino workers in the former British territory.

However, Willie Muser and Jimmy Alapag shot the lights out of the Queen Elizabeth stadium, paving the way for an 88-66 rout of the Giants.

The Kings, on the other hand, were looking to protect a clean slate when they faced the Beermen recently, but instead ran straight into a San Miguel squad that played sharp enough to post a 77-59 rout that pulled the crowd favorites to solo June Navarra

Tan nixes Granny Goose offer; Sison to coach Tortillos

By Calvin Cordova Cebu Daily News

CITING THE SAME REASONS AS when he first quit the post, former Granny Goose coach Jun Tan has denied he is making a return stint with the Tortillos in the commit PBL

The Cebu-based Tan told the CE-BU DARY NEWS that he has officially turned down the offer of Granny Goose to return to the squad.

Tan's decision paved the way for former Montaña mentor Robert Sison to take over the Tortilios.

"Much as I want to coach Granny Goose again, my business here [Cebu] would not allow me to do so,"

Earlier reports that came out in national newspapers said that Tan had aiready accepted his old job.

"My business here is growing and it's not practical for me to leave it," said Tan, who met with the Granny Goose management last week. "That's why I politely beg off to coach Granny Goose again and I'm grateful that the management also understood my situation."

Tan, however, accepted the offer to become the team's consultant.

Sison, who led Montaña to its lone championship in the 2004 Platmum Cup, resigned last month amid a cloud of controversy.

Tan said he will be working together with Sison to help Granny Goose achieve a decent finish in the upcoming tournaments.

"Robert told me that he would also use the system that I implemented when I was still the coach and it's good because the players would not adjust that much, * said Tarr.

Badminton revamp

By Marc Anthony Reyes

A FEW MONTHS BEFORE THE COUNTRY hosts its first internationally sanctioned tournament, Philippine badminton is headed for yet another revamp, one which threatens to detail a resuscitation program that has already been put in

The shakeup, insiders revealed yesterday, threatens to leave nothing untouched, including the post of new national coach Errol Chan, who authored a roadmap to recovery for a sport that has caught the nation's fancy.

Chan neither confirmed or denied the reports but admitted that a high-ranking official of the Philippine Badminton Association (PBA) has already informed him of the development.

The Incurrent tried to contact the PBA but was told to fax a formal letter so an interview can be arranged with PBA president Ming Ramos or executive vice president Edgardo Aglipay.

A long-time PRA official who once served as the grassroots development chief, Chan is said to be one of the "threats" to the PBA presidency.

Chan replaced Martin Araneta, who handled , the RP team's crammed preparation for the 23rd Southeast Asian Games, a stint that led to disascrous results.

Chan had already prepared a two-year program which was to start with the selection of the new RP team depending on their performance in the Philippine Open in Philippine Air Lines Flight 300 from Manila to Hong Kong, where the Talk 'N Text Purefoods match was to be staged over the weekend, random thoughts were runrung through my mand.

I was imagining myself in the shoes of newly appointed Phone Pals coach Derrick Pumaren, who I know must be feeling tremendous pressure going into his third game in the PBA Gran Matador Philippine Cup.

Before last Sunday's match, Dentick had lost two straight games (to Ginebra and Air21), and won none. There was no assurance that the record wouldn't go from bad to worse from 0-2 to 0-3-an unthankable scenano not only for Derrick but also for TNT governor Ricky Vargas, who had strongly batted for the veteran coach inside the PLOT board room.

6 Wy thoughts went to Ricky, who must be just as pressured as Derrick to deliver. From what I know, it was Ricky who had recommended Dernck over Chot Reyes after a deep and lengthy deliberation.

At the end of the day, PLDT head honeho Manny V. Pangilinan trusted Ricky's judgment and basketball instincts.

In like manner, Ricky granted TNT's new coach blanket authority to do what he

The media group arrived in Hong Kong Saturday noon and was whisked off to the Marco Polo Prince Hotel in Kowloon, where they were each presented a copy of the weekend sked prepared by executive secretary Tina de Quantos: Dinner at the classy and exclusive Aberdeen Marina at 6 p.m. hosted by MVP, TNFPurefoods game the following day, Sunday, at the Queen Elizabeth Stadium, and dinner at 8:30 p.m. at the famous Springdeer Restaurant, compliments of Ricky Vargas, the PBA's next chair.

A few hours before the Aberdeen dinner, we were informed that our host would not be able to join us, due to a very pressing matter that had kept him in Manıla. MVP said he would try to be in Hong Kong for the game.

Although we had looked forward to shooting the breeze with the country's business genius (whose network is currently No. 1 in terms of revenue), Ricky, Al, Atty. Paul Gueon and Dr. Raffy Bejar more than compensated for his absence.

We also enjoyed Chinese dishes which, Al said, was personally chosen by MVP: suckling pig, steamed red Garoupa, sautéed scallops with asparagus, etc.

An army of wildly-screaming fans predominantly female—gathered by the entrance of the Queen Elizabeth Stadium when our bus arrived for the game. They thought the vehicle was carrying PBA cagers.

They were not disappointed though, when the other bus arrived, carrying the Purefoods team. It took a while before the Chunkee Giants could get past the adoring fans and into the stadium. PFC team manager Alvin Patrimonio came in last but he continued to draw the biggest raves.

Inside the stadium, a Pingy asked if she could sit beside me. She asked where Kris Aquino was seated. I told her she was not in Hong Kong. She asked me why and I told her I didn't know. She admitted she was a showbiz fan but claimed that she also followed basketball closely. The Pinay OFW, who has been working in the former British territory since 1980, asked which team James Yap was playing for She had a lot of questions, I was relieved when the second quarter buzzer sounded and we had to leave our seats on the invitation of ABC-5 exec Winston de la Cruz to get some snacks at a nearby hotel.

The fina, score of the Hong Kong game may have been lopside-88-66, in favor of TNT-but the match was truly exciting.

Amazing Thai rider steals show from Aguilar, NZ ace

PUERTO PRINCESA CITY-A VASTLY IMproved Arnon Theplib of Thailand relegated the rivalry between the Philippines' top inder Glenn Aguilar of Caltex-Revtex and New Zealand ace James Robinson to a mere footnote Sunday as he ruled the 3rd Mayor Edward Hagedorn Cup in the 2006 Motocross Masters of Asia Sunday at the Puerto Princesa International Raceway here.

The youngest in the 23-man international field at 17, Theplib displayed skills way beyond his years to win unchallenged in both motos.

Not even runner-up Jye Harvey of Australia came close to bearing Theplib, who amassed 50 points for his victory.

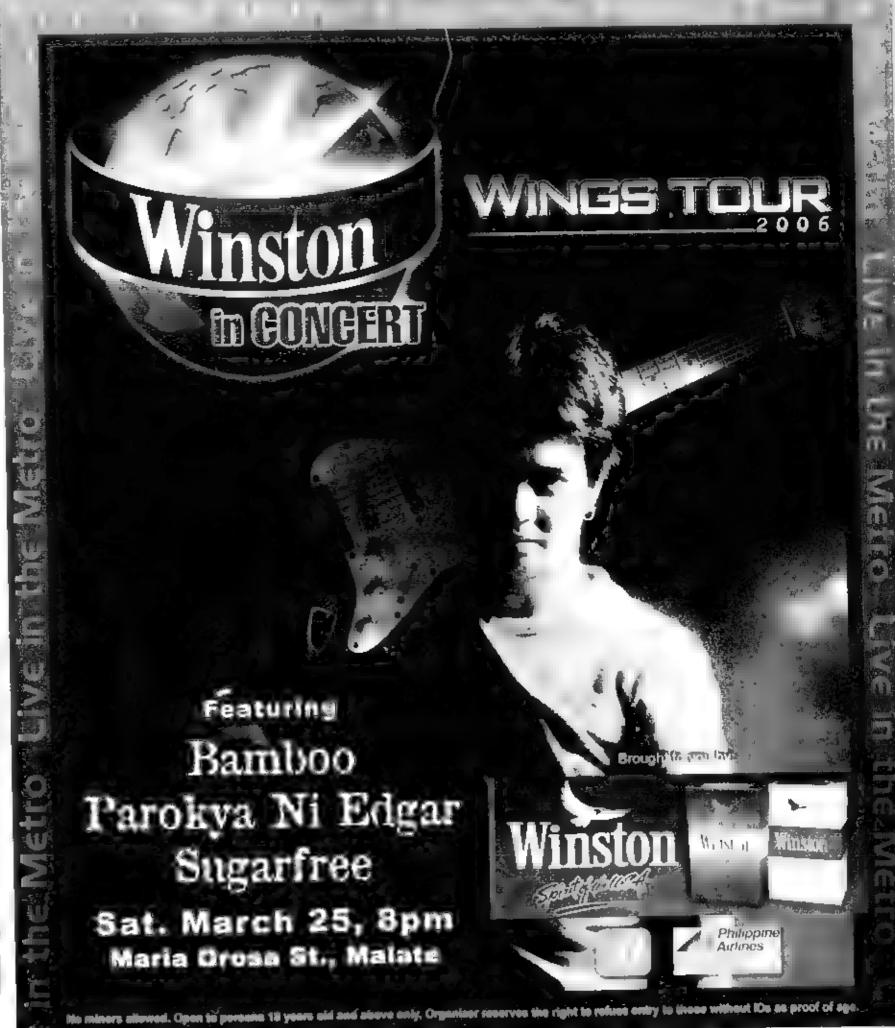

Indonesian Aep Dadang Supriatna wound up third with 40 points in both races.

Theplib, posting the fastest laptime of 1:21.932, wrapped up the nine-lap morning race in 23 minutes and 47.217 seconds, 4.66 seconds ahead of Harvey. He was more explosive in the afternoon where he clocked 24:16.605, pulling away early and claiming the checkered flag seven seconds ahead of Harvey, who earned 44 points.

Aguilar and Robinson, however, struggled for position in both races. Aguitar settled for fourth overall with 36 points, his best finish-fourth place—coming in the morning race, while Robinson wound up eighth overall.

Kobe helps Lakers pocket 'must-win' game

BRYANT: Shots fell this time.

BOSTON—KOBE BRYANT HAD 43 points, five rebounds and five steals and the Los Angeles Lakers salvaged the finale of a three-game road trip with a 105-97 win over the Boston Celtics in the NBA on Monday.

Bryant shot 18-of-39 and Lamar Odom added 17 points and nine rebounds for the Lakers, who never trailed and pulled a half-game ahead of Sacramento for seventh place in the Western Conference.

The Lakers avoided falling below .500 for the first time since a loss to Utah on Jan.

3 dropped them to 15-16.

"This was a must win for us," Bryant said. "We played well the emire trip, but it's just that we weren't able to close things out. Tonight was a win that we desperately needed."

Paul Pierce stored 26 and Tony Alien added a season-leigh 18 points for the Celtics, who have lost four of five to drop four games behind Philadelphia in the race for the eighth Eastern Conference playoff spot.

The Lakers' first two games of their road trip ended with missed contested 3-pointers by Bryant. The Lakers lost to New Jersey, 92-89, on Friday and to Cleveland, 96-95, on Sunday.

Bryant scored 16 points in the fourth quarter, including the Lakers' last 12.

"When the game is on the line, they put the ball in my hands," Bryant said. "I've gotta do what I've gotta do, I don't care if it's 50 shots, 60 shots, five shots."

In Auburn Hills, Machagan, Rasheed Wallace had 26 points and eight rebounds to help Detroit clinch the Central Division title via a 91-84 triumph over Atlanta.

Detroit (53-13) also reduced its magic number to clinch the Eastern Conference's best record to time over Miami.

Japan smears Cuban repute

san DIEGO—ICHIRO SUZUKI and his less-famous Japanese countrymen beat Cuba, 10-6, in the World Baseball Classic final on Monday.

Cuba had won 22 of 24 games in international competition and dominated the globe for decades, but they cracked at the worst possible time against a team which reached the semifinals only after the United States was upset by Mexico.

In the Classic's inaugural final, Japan led, 6-1, Cuba railied to within one to make it exciting, then Japan can away for good with four runs at the top of the ninth.

When reliever Akinori Otsuka got the final out, he was mobbed near the mound by his teammates. The Japanese then tossed Sadaharu Oh, their manager, into the air twice.

"I'm unbelievably happy," Ichiro said. "To be honest, I never imagined we'd get there. We had a great team, the best. I hope we showed everyone what a great sport baseball is."

"I never coached a team for a tournament like this, and never thought the pressure to be so high," Oh said. "Baseball is the best sport. Everyone has to work together. There is nothing more wonderful than that Japanese players did such a wonderful job and showed that to everyone in the world."

After the winners took a victory lap with a large Japanese flag, they celebrated in front of their dugout, with a large contingent of countrymen still cheering from the stands. Once in their clubhouse, they gathered around Oh for a final word from their manager, then ture into a champagne celebration.

"It's wonderful. That's the only thing I can say," Otsuka said.

'Don't bench me' Martin unhappy about diminished role on 'ASAP'

By Marinel R. Cruz

HERE'S SO MUCH I CAN DO WITH OR without the show having to be about me. I'm one of those players who can make the three-point shot. If you want me on your team, use me; don't bench me."

Martin Nievera was telling a group of entertainment writers on Saturday how neglected he was feeling for being one of the "lessused artists" on ABS-CBN's Sunday noontime variety show, "ASAP '05."

Martin, his ex-wife Pops Fernandez, Ariel Rivera and former Miss Universe Dayanara Torres, were the first hosts of the program launched in the early '90s.

The current edition of the show has over 30 hosts led by Zsa Zsa Padilla, Gary Valenciano and kuh Ledesma.

"Back then, everything revolved around [the four main hosts]," Martin recalled. "Now, [I'm among] the less-used artists. Tomorrow (Sunday, March 19) I'm singing Adam Sandler's 'Grow Old With You' for the Isegment on the] wedding of Claudine [Barretto] and Raymart [Santiago]. I have an album of wedding songs that became a double gold, and I have to sing that?"

Interviewed lates, Deo Endrinal, network vice president for Talk, Variety, and Reality argued that Martin had committed only six dates for "ASAP" this year-two in February, three in April and one in May.

Theory

Endrinal said the production team hadn't counted on Martin's availability on March 19 "We were told a week earlier. We couldn't just suddenly change the concept of the show, which was for Claudine. We asked Martin to sing Raymart's favorite song."

Martin had a theory: "If you ask ABS-CBN why these things are happening, they'll say, It's because Martin is never here. Try throwing me an offer-don't wait for me to be available."

"Martin is like an icon for the program," Endrinal conceded. We'd like to honor him as often as possible, [to mark] every nulestone in his career. We know that his dream is to really make it big internationally. We're always here to help him promote himself."

Martin stressed that he didn't want out: "I'm not telling the people (running the show) how to do their jobs; I'm offering my services. If you need another male host, I'm your guy,"

He added: "Believe it or not, I'm very faithful. I'm a team player. Do you know how many offers I've gotten from the other side? A lot. They're offering me a lot more than what I'm making right now. ABS-CBN

Screenwriter-actress Thompson adapts Christianna Brand's "Nurse Matilda" books, published from 1964 to 1974, and envisions the titular heroine as a "Mary Poppins for the Hogwarts generation." A magical narmy (Thompson) invades the household of a recently widowed father (Firth) and disciplines his unruly children. Michael Phillips of the Chicago Tribune opines that "the enjoyment of watching [this film] comes less from story matters and more from appreciating a top-shelf cast having a ball." El Online describes it as a "witty, rollicking kids' thovie that adults will enjoy too." Personally, we find great inspiration in our senior artists who are still productive and creative while their contemporaries have long retired or been sidelined by illness.

Take National Artist Eddle Romero. He's already in his 80s, but he's currently preparing to shoot his first digital feature. Writing the screenplay for him is young scripting prizewinner Rica Areva-

We like this fusion of mature and new screen artists, and think it augurs well for our film industry.

We're also happy to hear that Eddie Garcia and Gloria Romero wil co-star once more in a new Seiko Films production. Eddie is in his 80s and Giona is in her 70s, but they're still raring to give their new film everything they've got

In the field of television, we're impressed to see senior director Al Outun still megging big projects that much younger directors would just love to get their hands

Al's durable plus points are lus having been a dancer, and his mastery of the musical and musical vanety modes of production.

The fact that he's also a gifted visual artist helps further explain the striking visuals and artistic quality of his direction.

BRUCE Willis is proud of his latest film, "16 Blocks." It's a hit in the States, has gotten some good notices, and has reestablished him as an action-drama draw.

"16 Brocks" casts Willis as a defeated detective who finds redemption and the power to change in the most unlikely of men, a petty criminal (Mos Def) he's assigned to escort 16 blocks to the courthouse to testify before a grand jury.

Willis' character struggles to save the petty hood's life several times. In truth, however, it's Mos Del's Donner directs.

The international jury consisted of Thessaloniki film fest chief Michel Demopolous of Greece as president and, as members: screenwriter Jose E Lacaba of the Philippines; film distributor Jochen D. Girsch of Belgium; actress Meret Matter of Switzerland, and producer Paloma Rocha of Brazil.

way. They expect something, for instance, a homecoming welcome. It's not as if I'm on the show every weekend. I wish they'd do their homework naman. You watch if I hit it big in the US, they'll be promoting me on 'ASAR'

What are your plans for the year?

On April 15, I'll do another fundraiser in Los Angeles with MiG Ayesa and other Filipino artists who are in the US now-for the Leyte landslide victims. In May, I'm touring Europe with Pops... then Las Vegas in July.

How did you get involved in the fundraiser

My sister Tere's son, who goes to the International School, came home one day feeling depressed. He said his teacher, Gaia's father, had a problem. A lot of people ended up wanting to help, and it snowballed into a show. The baby could go under the knife on the very day of the performance.

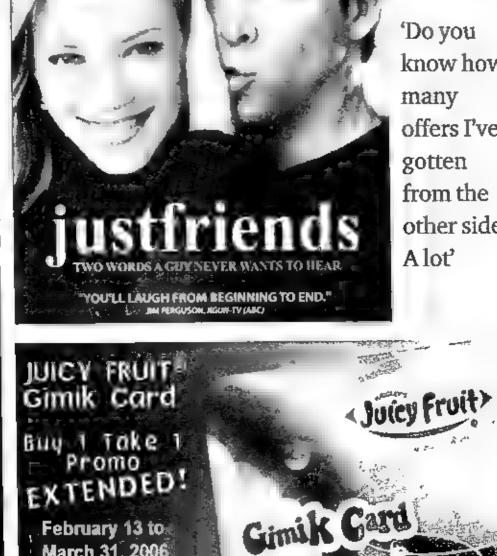

Will you henceforth be concerned about helping people?

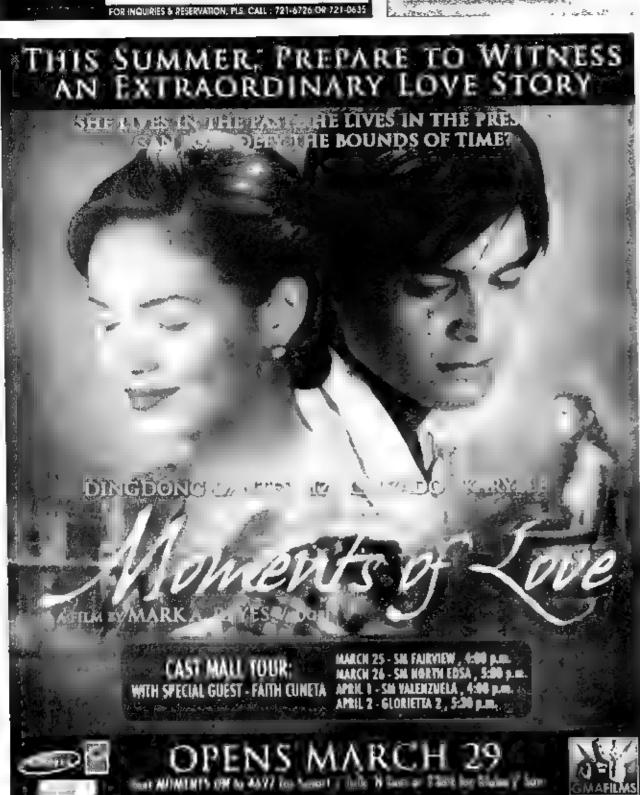

You've got to start somewhere I tost my fa ther to a similar disease. Hopefully my name still has some puil.

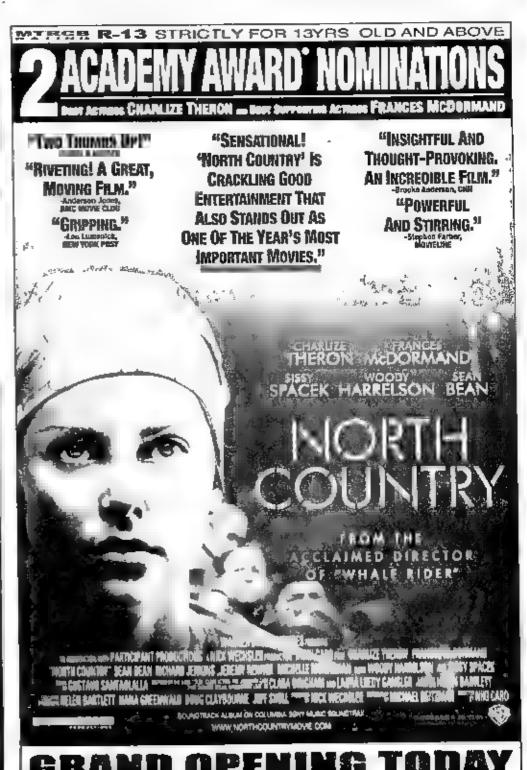

Once, in Japan, I asked a group, 'If I kissed you on the lips, how much would you give me?' I raised $5,000 for typhoon victims, which I donated it to the ABS-CBN Foundation. By the end of that tour, I had donated almost $20,000. But did ABS-CBN know I did that? It's not important. I just want you to see that I am a team p.ayer.

Is there anything else you dream of as a performer?

I want to be ready big and come back to this country, my hometown, and do a big show with an orchestra for free. It would be fully produced but I will not charge a cent. That's when you know you're a big star

LOS ANGELES-Actor Tom Cruise threatened to boycott promotion of his upcoming Paramount Pictures film unless a sister cable TV network pulled a "South Park" rerun lampooning the Church of Scientology, industry sources said on Friday.

Shares close 1.04% higher on RP's improving fiscal picture

By Elizabeth L. Sanchez

STOCKS YESTERDAY SURGED to its highest level in six-and-ahalf years, with share prices closing 1.04 percent higher, on the back of positive economic news, analysts said.

According to traders, foreign investors are seen to be returning to the Phinppines after moving to the sidelines over the past few weeks amid continuing efforts to oust President Macapagal-Arroyo.

The Philippine Stock Exchange composite index finished up 22,40 points or 1.04 percent higher at 2,185.71, after trading between 2,163.31 and 2,186.34.

This is the main index's best finish since Aug. 31, 1999 when it ended at 2,173.82, according to the PSE's research department.

The broader all shares index gained 13.76 points or 1 percent to 1,336.02.

Analysts said that a "crucial" resistance or psychological level-pegged at 2,160 to 2,170-was breached in yesterday's trade. They said the breach could trigger another round of buying this week.

"There was a technical breakout, the next target is 2,200," Joseph Roxas, president at

Strengthening drive against counterfeiting

By Ronnel W. Domingo

AN INTER-AGENCY BODY TASKED TO PROtect intellectual property rights yesterday said it had adopted a 'no settlement' policy on cases involving IPR violations.

The policy is aimed at strengthening the country's drive against counterfeiting.

The national committee on IPR, which the Intellectual Property Office is heading, said it was implementing the "draconian measure in addressing IP cases" by no ionger allowing out-of-court settlement between parties in cases that were being investigated.

IP Philippines Director General Adrian S Cristobal Jr. said the measure would give more teeth to enforcement and prosecution efforts and, at the same time, legally disposing of prospective and pending IP

The committee is composed of representatives from the Criminal Investigation and Detection Group of the Philippine National Police, National Bureau of Investigation, Department of Justice and the Bureau of Customs, Office of the Court Administrator of the Supreme Court, National Book Development Board and the Optical Media

Cristobal said these agencies agreed to adopt a uniform system in enforcement, investigation and preparation of IP cases.

He said the DOJ had ordered prosecutors to shun settlements between parties in IP cases at the prehminary investigation

The "no settlement" policy is expected to discourage cases of piracy as well as dispel allegations that the government's prosecution of IP cases are weak and slow.

Also, the DOJ's anti-piracy unit has decided it would no longer entertain affidavits of desistance from parties whose IP rights have been violated.

instead, the DOJ would push ahead in resolving the cases based on the evidence pre-

"If parties want to settle, they could just do it before the court or during the trial

Earlier, Cristobal was designated to oversee the government's overall ann-piracy campaign as President Macapagal-Arroyo ordered the agencies to pursue and ensure convictions of cases in court.

At the same time, the committee reported that at least P10 million worth of counterfeit products were seized last January, bringing the government's total haul to Pl 11 billion in pirated items since January 2005.

During the event, Michael Dell, chair of the world's largest computer manufacturer, announced plans to expand the contact center, first to its full compliment of 700 employees, before further adding 1,400 seats to it.

"Our plan is to expand [to 1,400 employees], then we'll evaluate it from there," Dell said during a briefing.

The contact center occupies 145,000 square feet of space at the SM Mall of Asia complex at the controversia. Pasay City reclamation area.

A statement released by Dell said the facility is equipped for the company's most sophisticated training programs, and features technologically advanced" tools for delivering "superior customer experience."

Deli officials declined to reveal the cost of the facility or how much more they plan to invest in it to double its capacity.

The company has 30 other contact centers operating around the world, making its local operations more of a token presence, especlaily after Dell announced the previous day plans to hire up to 20,000 employees for its

The president and chief operating offioer of the sprawling San Miguel Corp. has been given his 30th simultaneous chairmanship, that of Del Monte Pacific Ltd., the Singaporean-listed fruit and beverage company that San Miguel and Unilab heir Joselito Campos Jr. recently acquired.

Prior to Del Monte, Ang, 50, was already chairman of the board of 24 other companies, mostly part of the San Miguel empire, but also including a number of non-San Miguel ventures like Philippine Diamond Hotel, the moribund Cyber Bay and two other real estate concerns.

Ang, the trusted lieutenant of San Miguel chairman Eduardo Cojuangco Jr. also sits as chair and president of the Smits, the San Miguel IT Services Group also based in the Ortigas headquarters, and the little-known San Miguel Mills Inc.

Even during the early Erap days when Cojuangeo regained control of San Miguel 12 years after his abrupt departure, Ang had been heard telling friends and associates about the long working hours at the country's largest food, packing and beverage concerns.

Still, the time concerns did not deter both Cojuangeo and Ang from engi-

But the outcome of the encounter, aithough it eased tensions, could not apparently even be diplomatically termed

"The meeting went very well and ended with a better understanding of [their] respective positions, [with] both sides agreeing to respect each other's views," said former Finance Secretary Ramon del Rosario Jr.

Del Rosario confirmed that the meeting had indeed taken place in his Phinma penthouse office in Rockwell on March 7, not last week as previously reported in this column.

Del Rosario said alumni coordinator Bro. Rafael Donato was in the meeting,

STATE-OWNED LENDERS DEVELOPMENT Bank of the Philippines and Land Bank of the Philippines are planning to enter the offshore bond market to raise $230 milion to $280 million, top officials of these banks said.

The DBP intends to sell in April or May $130 million in hybrid instruments eligible as core or tier 1 capital. This is the first time DBP will venture into the foreign capital market.

Landbank plans to issue $100 million to $150 million worth of bonds for its supplementary or tier 2 capital during the same peried. This will be its first attempt to borrow · from overseas markets in nine years.

These activities will allow the two government banks, whose capital raising activities are restricted by their respective charters, to meet suffer requirements under the new la--ternational Accounting Standards and Basie 2 , capital adequacy framework.

 During DBP's appreciation party for its conduit wholesale lenders Monday might, DBP president Reynaldo David said US-based global rating agency Standard & Poor's was undertaking a due diligence on the bank to rate its proposed hybrid bond float.

The planned offering, to be arranged by Barclays and Deutsche Bank, is still awaiting the BSP's and Department of Finance's ap-

Hybrid tier 1 capital instruments have equity-like features that make them acceptable as tier 1 capital. They may be in the form of unsecured subordinated debt or preferred shares with step-up feature.

This and its planned domestic fund-raising activity will raise DBP's capital adequacy ratio to 38 percent from 25 percent, David said.

In the meantime, the DOF has approved Landbank's bid to issue up to $150 million in subordinated debt maturing in five years. They removed the guarantees and we want it that way because we want it as tier 2 capital," Landbank president Gilda Pico said.

The bond issue will raise Landbank's capital adequacy ratio to 17 percent from the current 12.8 percent. It has mandated Deutsche Bank to manage its tier 2 issuance. Landbank is the country's third biggest bank in terms of assets (P310.45 billion) as of end-2005 while the DBP ranks seventh with assets of P210.6 billion.

Gov't may increase domestic borrowings

By Michelle V. Remo

THE DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE said the government was considering increasing its domestic borrowings to as much as 65 percent of its total financing requirement quirement if the situation in the ferred domestic borrowings over for the year if interest rates would remain favorable.

Under the fiscal program for 2006, the government intends to borrow 52 percent of its financing requirements from domestic creditors and secure the remaining 48 percent from foreign lenders

The 52-percent share of domestic borrowings to the total funding requirement would amount to about P310 billion, while the 48percent foreign credit translates to about $4 billion.

Finance Secretary Margarito Teves said the programmed borrowing mix of 52.48 could still be adjusted depending on fiscal and interest rate developments

Market prospects getting better as investor interest in RP improves

By Doris C. Dumlao

THE AYALAS' BANK OF THE PHILIPPINE ISlands plans to unload as much as P10 billion worth of bad assets this year.

BPI president Aurelio Montinola III said the bank had planned to unload only PS billion to P6 billion worth of non-performing loans and foreclosed real estate assets this year. This might be increased to as much as P10 billion worth of bad assets in view of improving foreign investors interest in the country.

Montinola said the bank's optimism was not even hinged on the prospective extension of the Special Purpose Vehicle Act.

He said more foreign investors were interested in going to the Philippines now.

Before we were talking to only one or two (potential buyers) at any given time. Now we're talking to three to five groups. I think they're talking to other banks too, and that's good for the country," Montinola said.

Last year, BPI unloaded about P4.6 billion in bad assets-P2.1 billion worth real and properties owned and acquired (ropous) and P2.5 billion worth of non-performing loans.

He said BPI's total bad assets were estimated at P45-P48 billion, composed of about P34 billion worth of roposs and P14 billion worth of soured loans. These figures included bad assets inherited from BPI's latest acquisition, Prudential Bank.

"On BPI side, our NPL ratio is below 5 percent. It increased to 6.8 percent when we included those of Prudential Bank," Montinola said.

Montinola said BPI would also focus on cleaning up the bad assets assumed from Prudential Bank.

"It would be nice if we could bring that (NPL ratio) to 6 or even 5.5 percent," he said At the same time, BPI is aiming at a higher more than the projected loan growth rate of 3-4 percent for the entire banking industry. He said the 10 percent rise in BPI's outstanding loans in 2005 was partly due to the loan growth this year at 7-8 percent, or much acquisition of Prudential Bank. He said it was too early to tell how much profit BPI, which posted a net profit of P8.4

billion in 2005, would realize this year "Sometimes when the economy improves, the spreads also tighten. We'll just have to see what happens this year," Montinola says.

Gov't to speed up rehab, repair of irrigation systems

THE DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE WILL ung on irrigation support because the lack of it fast track the rehabilitation and repair of the country's national and communal irrigation meet its rice production targets in the previous systems in time for the planting season, Agriculture Secretary Domingo Panganiban said.

Panganiban said the Presidential directive to pump prime the economy listed agriculture as one of the government's priority programs.

He said that out of the P3.23 billion required for the irrigation program this year, the Department of Budget and Management (DBM) had released PL96 billion.

So far, irrigated water systems have been restored in areas covering 21,703 hectares under the National Irrigation Administration's urigation system rehabilitation and repair program, Panganiban said.

90,000 hectares of farmlands to achieve the government's rice production target for 2006. Panganiban said the government was focus-

According to the NIA, of the total 3.126 million hectares of land planted to rice nationwide, only 44.84 percent or 1.402 million hectares have functioning irrigation systems. Some 1.724 million hectares either have defective irrigation systems or were relying primarily on rainwater for rice planting activities.

Panganiban said that with the support given by the government to the irrigation program, the agriculture department was expecting to restore irrigated water to an 618,730 hectares by 2008

The government has earmarked P25 billion This program was aimed at irrigating for the three-year irrigation rehabilitation program aimed at supporting agriculture to achieve its goal of rice sufficiency by 2009, Panganiban said.

Plan to stop automatic IT firms urged to seek Aussie partners debt servicing bucked

By Michelle V. Remo

THE DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE HAS OPposed the plan in Congress to lift the automatic budget appropriation for debt servicing, saying it would affect the Philippines' abinty to get credit from the international financial

The DOF said in a position paper that getting prior Congressional approval for debt servicing could tempt some legislators to call for a debt moratorium, which it said could wreak havoc on the economy.

The DOF cited the case of Argentina, Peru and Russia, that found themselves with even bigger economic problems than what they had before they declared a debt moratorium.

Argentina's unemployment rate rose to 18 percent and its currency depreciated by more than 100 percent in 2001 when it said it could no longer guarantee payments of its foreign obligations, the DOF said.

Peru, on the other hand, was declared an "Ineligible borrower" by the International Monetary Fund in 1985 and thus found difficulty foreign sourcing credit.

Dy attributed the reduction of the banks' bad assets to the following: Expansion of industry loans by an average of 3.6 percent per year since 2001; the sale of bad loans to asset management firms under the special purpose vehicle act, and property prices that have bottomed out are recovering, making these assets more attractive to potential buvers.

Congress, through a bicameral conference committee, has extended the SPV law for another two years adopting the Senate version which limited the nonperforming loans eligible for incentives.

The DOF added that under the current fiscal problem, the government intends to address the measiy budget for infrastructure and basic services by shoring up revenue collection through tax measures.

LOCAL INFORMATION TECHNOLOGYenabled service firms have been urged to go into partnerships with Australian firms to take advantage of the growing demand for business process outsourcing services in Australia.

James Haensly, vice president of New South Wales-based FooBooOnline.com, said in a statement that the market was growing since outsourcing was relatively new in Australia.

Business process outsourcing refers of getting third-party firms in countries with lower wages to perform non-core functions, such as accounting and customer service, to cut costs.

Haensly said activities likely to be outsourced to Philippine companies include financial back office transactions, IT services and data transcription

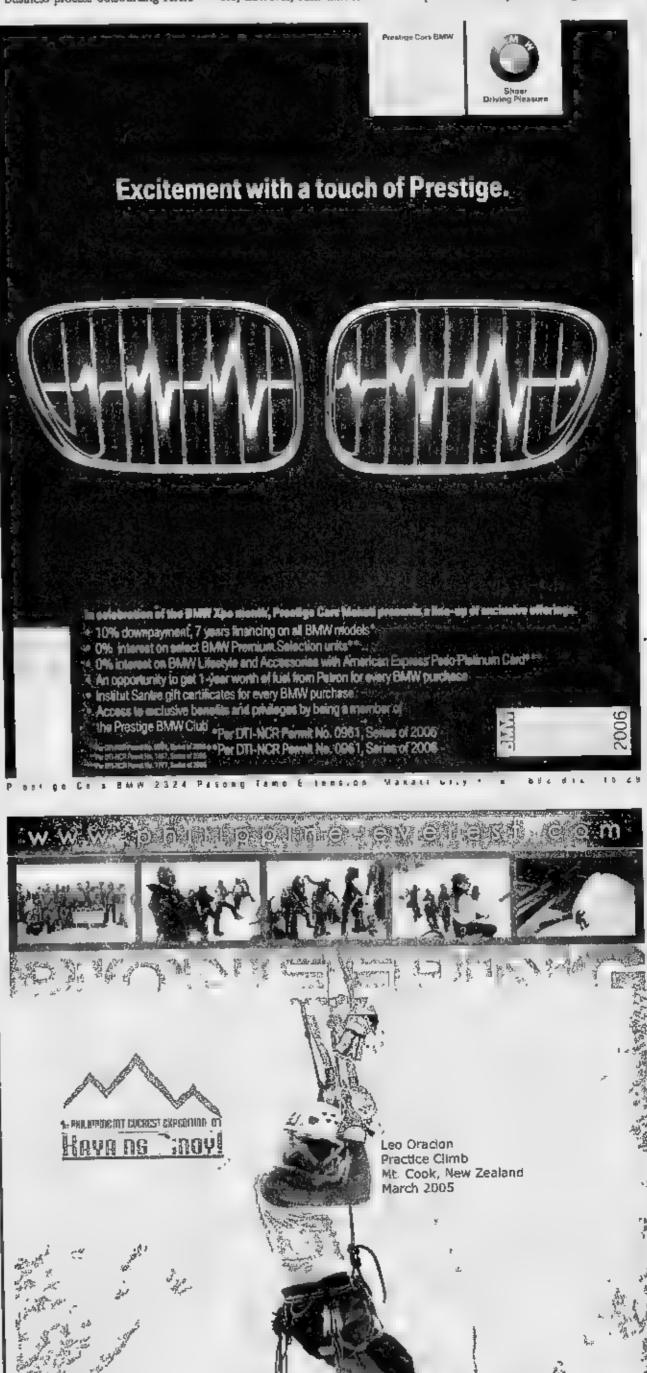

Headquartered in Chattswood, PooBoo is a consulting and brokerage firm that caters to BPO market in Asia

He, however, said that local companies should look for partnerships with Australian counterparts to get a foothold in Australia's BPO market.

"Since Australia is just getting start-'ed on the BPO wave and the business 4 culture is different (there) compared ? to United States, it would be essential " to have excellent partnerships in the local market to bund the confidence, connections and opportunities in the first few years," Haensly said.

He added that in the next five years, outsourcing firms would expect more than just reducing costs.

To Mt. Pinatubo and back

By Charles E. Buban

O YOUR GROUP will also bring those Alterras to Mt. Pinatubo tomorrow?" inquired one off-road club member pointing to several parked sport utility vehicles of Isuzu. "Yes, together with antsy? After all, most of today's SUVs are the D-Max pickups," this writer designed to be more "civilized" and bethe D-Max pickups," this writer answered back.

He didn't inquire further although this writer sensed his disbelief wondering perhaps why our group would risk driving the Alterra to Mt. Pinatubo's rugged and unforgiving terrain.

But who could blame him for being

A TOUGH off-reader, the Alterra is very capable when the going gets tough.

sides their drivers seldom go off-road but rather stay on the paved streets most of "Many of today's buyers are attracted by an SUV's aggressive looking stance and other exciting features. Sadly, they no longer bother whether the vehicle is capable enough to venture to far off beaten path or will it perform as expected when circumstances warrant it," Art Balmadrid, Isuzu Philippines Corp. VP for corporate business division.

Explore places

However, Naval noted there will be some people who do or would want to take their SUVs off the road to explore places that they could not go with a car, and to enjoy the driving at the same

This is what IPC ought to showcase with its Alterra and the D-Max when it organized the Isuzu Mt. Pinatubo 4x4 Drive early thus month.

"For IPC the better way is to venture to places where our latest vehicle offerings will be rested thoroughly. As a matter of fact, this is IPC's third time in Mt Pinatubo since this is one of those places where we can evaluate our vehicles in off-road situations," said Timmy Naval, IPC public relations manager.

Ronald Baladad, IPC public relations supervisor added: "Our customers ap-preciate that the Alterra features a Touch-On-The-Fly system that will allow them to engage to different four-wheeldrive modes while driving, that it is powered by a three-liter direct-injection turbocharged diesel engme that promises to be a powerful yet efficient power plant, and that is equipped with Isuzu's patented Flex Ride MOVE (Mobility On Versatile Equilibrium) that promises a much smoother and comfortable ride. But would it be moe to experience these fearures in actual situation?"

'Warm up' the Alterra

Indeed, IPC was so confident that the day before the group's actual drive to Mt. Pinatubo, they let us motoring media to take turns in "warming up" the Alterra (around Sacobia bridge near Clark Centennial Expo) for the next day's event.

That afternoon of driving through loose or slippery grounds—plus how the way some of the drivers zigged and zagged the Alterra-already proved the SUV's readmess

Although the way to Pinatubo's crater is always difficult, Alterra's straightforward system easily pulled itself through rocky river crossings. The Alterra's fourwheel-drive low gear setting was essentially helpful for creeping over big rocks and slogging through loose sands.

tn the end, the Alterra made us all behevers. Considering the Alterra that the group used all carried standard sets of equipment, they still went home unscathed excepts for the expected dirt and grime

"Our buyers should now feel confident that they not only have a handsome SUV but also highly capable off-road companion," said Baladad

Nissan sacrifice worth our while

I HAVE TO GIVE IT TO NISSAN.

For its decision to recall its best-selling X-Trail sold since 2003, Nissan made a big sacrifice that could cost the Japanese automaker losses in millions of dotlars.

The recall was a result of a factory defect discovered in the fuel tank.

In its statement to announce the recall of 475,400 units of the Nissan Primera and Nissan X-Trails, Nissan said the affected countries include those from Africa, the Middle East and Asia/Oceania, including Australia, Australia, Hong Kong, India, Indonesia, Malaysia, New Zealand, Tarwan, Thailand and the Philippines. Only Canada, which introduced the X-Trail last year, is not included in the re-

In the Philippines, some 4,000 X-Trails are affected by the recali-

Since its introduction in July 2003, more than 6,400 X-Trails were sold in the Philippines. But X-Trails produced after January 2005 are not affected by the recall.

The recall is related to the fuel miet to the gasoline tank called the fuller filler tube, which may rust at the tube-mounting bracket. A pinhole may result from the rust formation, which can cause a fuel leak during full refuel-

But the formation of rust will take anywhere from 10 to 15 years to develop enough perforation for a pinhole to form, depending on humidity and other factors.

"I would like to emphasize that it is the overall safety of all Nissan vehicles that is paramount in this campaign. This is the reason we are engaging in this voluntary recall campaign to inspect and service affected vehicles. The cost of this campaign will run into millions of pesos, but that is something that Nissan is willing to shoulder completely for the peace of mund of our X-Trail buyers," Said Leman Lee, Nissan Motor Philippines Inc. president and CEO.

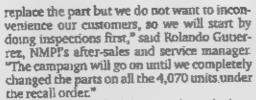

Starting May this year, all Nissan dealers nationwide will replace free-of-charge the fuel filler tube with one that has a higher protection against corrosion.

It is now standard practice for all car manafacturers worldwide to make a recall of cartain vehicle models when a potential problem has been identified. In fact, there have been more than a dozen recalls made every year worldwide since 2002 by various carmakers for certain vehicle models," Lee said

"It only takes about one and a half hours to

NMPI also clanfied that no other vehicle in its lineup is affected by the recall, particularly all the variants of the Sentra, Cefiro and Sere-

"It is worth noting that our X-Trail customers are very much happy with the quality and performance of their units, and it is for this reason that we owe them proper action on thus matter," Lee said.

CHEERS TO CIVIC! Do you know that the Honda Civic is 33 years old this year? On its 33rd year, the Civic was chosen the 2006 Car of the Year by Motor Trend, one of America's most prestigious auto magazines. Consistently, the Civic is voted Car of the Year in its class. The award extends to the entire Civic Sedan and Civic Coupé lineup including the environmentally responsible Civic Hybrid and high-performance Civic Si models. The Motor Trend editorial staff selected the Honda Civic from a field of 28 new or substantially revised models-the largest to date-recognizing it for exceptional value, superiority in its class and the most significant development on the new-car scene for 2006. Testing took place over a two-week period that included thousands of miles of on-track driving and on-street evaluation, along with several days of walk-around appraisals. Hooray! That calls for a celebration, Don Arnel (Doria)? I can see Arnel's angels-Tin Tin, Sheryl and Carla—amiling.

And now, Chinese cars

ALTHOUGH AN UNPLEASANT INCIdent marred the launching here on Feb. 28 of a Chinese brand of motor vehicles, it will by no means stop the eventual influx of Chinese-made cars.

In 2005, China exported 172,800 vehicles (mostly tracks), an ancrease of 27 percent from the previous year. Chery Automobile Co., one Chinese manufacturer, sold 18,000 passenger cars overseas. Chery and other Chinese car exporters are currently focused on the Middle East, Russia and Southeast Asia but are eyeing the rich North American and European markets. To sell cars, not just tracks. In fact, Chery aims to sell cars in the United States in late 2007 via American entrepreneur Malcolm Bricklin. By 2008, Chery hopes to export 300,000 to 400,000 cars to the United States and other countries. Geely, another manufactures, plans to produce two milhon cars a year by 2015, with twothirds of these to be sold outside China.

Standards

But will Chinese cars meet US and European safety, quality and environ-mental standards? At present, not likely, although foreign automakers that have joint ventures with China's state-owned car companies already export cars. Honda Motor Co. jountly runs a factory in Shanghai with Guangzhou Automobile Group and Dongfeng Honda Automobile Co. that produces the Jazz compact car for export. Honda expects to ship 25,000 Jazz units from China to Europe this year and the export figure will be increased to 50,000 eventually.

Made-in-China cars were already being sold in the Philippines long before the Nexus brand was launched last month. However, these cars are, strictly speaking, not Chinese cars as they bear the General Motors brand: the Chevrolet Venture minivan and the Chevolet Lumina midsize sedan. GM, by the way, sued Chery, allegmg that Chery's best-selling export model, the four-door compact known as the QQ, was a copy of a car designed by GM's South Korean affiliate, GM Daewoo. The two reached a setthement last year, but would not reveal details. One or two Japanese carmakers have also sued Chinese manufacturers in the past for copying their designs, but I can't remember which

Determined

The Chinese penchant for copying foreign automakers' innovations and designs and the generally inconsistent quality may not win buyers outside China despite the lower prices, but watch out! China is determined to transform its automobile manufacturing industry into a global force.

The Lifan Group, one of the v biggest motorcycle manufacturers with sales in 112 countries, together with the Communist Party is bidding to buy a sophisticated car engine plant in Brazil from Dannier-Chrysler and BMW in order to take it apart, piece by piece, and transport it to western China where it will be put back together again.

If Lifan succeeds, China could leapfrog. South Korea to carch up with Japan, Germany and the United States in producing fuel-efficient yet comfortable cars like the Honda Civic and the Toyota Corolla, For the biggest technical obstacle facing Chinese automakers is their failure to develop a sophisticated, reliable engine as they modernize and prepare to export to the United States and Europe.

Tritec engine

The Campo Largo engine factory that Lifan wants to buy was built in southern Brazil in the late 1990s at a cost of $500 million by a 50-50 joint venture of Chrysler (before its takeover by Daimler Benz) and BMW. It combines the latest American and German technology to produce the 1.6-liter, 16-valve Tritec engine, one of the most rechnologically advanced and fuel-efficient car engines in the

By the time production began in September 1998, however, the Campo Largo engine factory was already a corporate orphan due to Daimler's takeover of Chrysler. Dalmler had ample engine manufacturing capacity of its own and was uncomfortable collaborating with its German archival,

Nonetheless, BMW installed its half of the engines from Campo Largo in its Mini Cooper while Chrysier put its share of the engines into its Neon compact cars and the PT Cruiser. Now, 27 BMW has announced that future engines for the Mini Cooper will come from a factory in France owned by PSA Peugeot Citroen.

Even if Lifan succeeds in bringing the Campo Largo engine plant home, China won't find it easy entering developed car markets. It took Japanese car companies some 20 years to establish themselves in the US market, Korean automakers did it in about 10. How long will it take the Chinese? @ (With reports from The Wall Street Journal and The New York Times)

Lessons in and from failure

A BAD EXPERIENCE, EVEN WITH the smallest of automotive details, is often the first step down the long provincial highway of disenchantment. It would not be exaggerated to say that we demand nothing less than faithful, unerring operation from the simplest of features found on our automobiles.

Being mechanical in nature, no amount of maintenance or care can stave off the mevitable failure of any of a myriad of a car's systems. Strangely, it is in these moments of failure that we learn more about cars-and sometimes more of our own seives.

Hydraulic brake line failure

There are failures that are categorically more catastrophic than the odd cabin bulb conking out or the eigarette lighter that does not glow orange anymore. Take a hydraulic brake line failure for instance. Characteristically sig naled by a sickening, sinking feeling, this motoring malady is physically mandested by the middle pedal slowly traveling all the way to the floor pan

The ability to brake is severely himdered and gets to a point where only an unmovable object will halt your now unstoppable hunk of metal on four wheels. You're lucky if this occurs in crawling traffic as fender benders are more often than not, survivable.

Take this system failure to an empty stretch of expressway, at double the legal speed limit and I'm sure many will begin to contemplate their continued existence on this earth. Purpose Driven Life or not, you will ask "what's it all about" questions when faced with the lethality of velocity. Thust me on this

Then there are the immediate and catastrophic "absence of traction" situations-random, freak evenus that will put the fear of a supreme being into most any spiritual skeptic. There's nothing like a complete tire failure or an unintended aquaplaring stunt to make one proclaim their faith, out loud and #### with the utmost fervor and conviction. Significant factors

Tire failures are fewer and far between these days, awing to two significant factors:

 Slower average speeds are traveled these days because of the worsening traffic. The tires therefore are not asked to operate at the limits of temperature, friction and speed anymore.

2) Technology is allowing tires to deal with so much more trauma and abuse. One can be assured that once a blowout occurs, something rather extreme has happened to the tire.

Aquaplaning, or slodding out of control over water, is also an equally rare occurrence nowadays. Again, improvements in the ability of tires to displace standing water or to entically reacquaint themselves with the road surface are almost bullerproof in this day and age

Not every drive into a puddle of water will result in a total loss of grip and poise. It takes a very foolish or unlucky person to find themselves in such a cheek-elenching predicament, with several factors having to be in cahoots to produce a truly terrible (or terrific) slide. Speed and sudden, improper turn-ins are the biggest culprits in this

I've personally been in both these uncontrolled situations in the last half year or so, probably owing more to the fact that I spend quite a lot of seat time ut cars but also quite possibly just something that can be attributed to my dodgy luck. My resignation is more stubbors and dumb than stoically defiant, acrually.

What about the less life-threatening situations when something in our cars fails to deliver as promised? Is there as much to be learned from these annoying occurrences?

Horn malfunction

Just last week the horn on my daily drive failed in the middle of my morning commute. While this particular malfunction sounds rather innocuous, imagine the sheer terror of not being able to warn rampaging buses of the existence of a tiny little hatchback, it's like not being able to say, "Excuse me," to the schoolyard bully on your way to the drinking fountain

During the postmortem on the spent horn, it was discovered that there was no electrical problem that caused said system to tank. It just failed due to too much use and abuse, somewhat a rare occurrence in a car that is less than two years old. Chalk this one up to driving habits and my volatile temper. In the end I did the poor horn in, with my spiteful, venomous use of said equip-

The author stands guilty. No warranty claim here, ladies and gentlemen. This is a case of pure driver abuse and shows complete negligence and the lack of car sympathy, clear and simple. Was the poor from rehabilitated back into usefulness? Not by any chance. It got replaced by a louder, more intimidating tone-one that'll knock the sunglasses off the next blase jaywalker. How telling Indeed,

IN AN EFFORT TO keep school children in school, the National Food Authority and the Department Education launched here the Food for School Program II recently

The program shall benefit at least 2,555 Grade 1 and pre-elementary pupils in 24 pre-identified public schools in Tawi Tawi.

NFA Tawi-Tawi provincial manager Israel Jadjuh said that the NFA has alloted a total of 1,175 bags of rice fortified with iron for the program's implementation for 23 school days for the month of March alone.

Under the program, the school children will be given a kilogram of rice for every day in school while their parents undergo values formation activities and productivity skills at the same time.

The program was conceived to answer the growing hunger and lack of proper nutritton among public elementary school children.

A survey conducted by the SWS showed that 21.46% of these children suffrom short-term hunger syndrome and undernutrition

NFA's "buy-back" program benefit North Cotabato farmers

AT LEAST 48,964 BAGS OF PALAY AMOUNTING TO P28.3 MILLION HAVE been sold to the National Food Authority by nine farmers' cooperatives, farmers' organizations and irrigators as of January this year under the agency's Farmers' Option to Buy Back (FOBB) program. The program allows endividual farmers and farmers' organizations to deliver and sell their palay stocks at NFA-designated warehouses with the option to buy back the same stocks within six months or within one cropping season, giving them the opportunity to avail of their stocks as the need arises. The minimum deposit is 100 bags for individual farmers and 500 bags for farmers' organizations or cooperatives. NFA previncial manager Fernando Nuñez said that this scheme will enable palay farmers to meximize their earnings by withdrawing and setting their stocks when the buying price in the market is higher. LPG prices have been reduced four times since january, for a total cut of P2.24 a kilogram or P24.64 a cylinder.

Oil firms cut LPG prices

Reduction in int'l LPG prices cited

By Abigail L. Ho

LESS THAN A WEEK SINCE THE LAST PRICE rollback, oil firms have again slashed prices of their liquefied petroleum gas by P1 a kilo-

Petron Corp., Pilipinas Shell Petroleum Corp., Chevron Philippines Inc. and Total (Philippines) Corp. cut prices by the same level effective 12:01 am today. Today's reduction brings the prices of Petron's Gasul to between P483 and P493 a cylinder, Shell's Shellane at between P495 and P510, and Total's TotalGaz at around P482.50. As with the previous price reductions, the oil firms cited the drop in this month's international contract price for LPG, as well as competitive market forces, as the reasons behind the rollback.

These new suggested retail prices already include the 12 percent value added tax

The new retail price for Chevron's Caltex LPG was not available as of press time

According to data from the Department of Energy, the international contract price of LPG shed almost $100 this month, failing to $530 per metric ton (MT) from an all-time high of $625 50 per MT in February.

In January, international prices soured to $582 a MT from $538 the month before

Since the start of the year, LPG prices have risen four times by P2.17 per kilogram or P23.87 per 11 knogram cylinder

Prices have since been reduced four times for a total cut of P2.24 a kilogram or P24.64 a cylinder

Rules on sale of LPG as car fuel readied

THE JOINT GOVERNMENT OIL INDUSTRY Technical Working Group, a collaboration between the government and the private sector, has completed the guidelines covering the sale of liquefied petroleum gas, chiefly used for cooking, as transport fuel.

Eastern Petroleum Corp. president and working group member Fernando Martinez said the new autogas standards were completed last week and would soon be included in the Philippine National Standards

The new rules, Martinez said, were based on the Australian autogas standards.

These were not as stringent, however, to allow more players to partic.pate.

Despite this, he said safety was a prime consideration in drafting the rules. Under the new rules, oil firms who want to invest in the autogas business need not put up dedicated stations. They can just place autogas dispensing pumps beside those dispensing gasoline, kerosene and diesel. A certain distance, however, should be maintained to ensure safety as LPG is highly ßammable.

Martinez said he expected the completion of the autogas standards to help jumpstart the

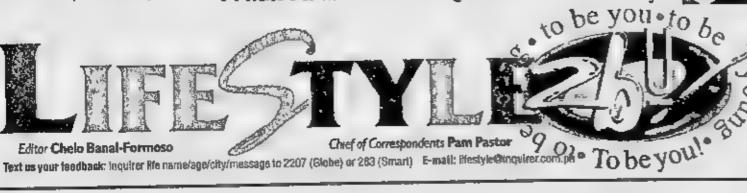

He said that according to initial computations, motorists could slash as much as 25 percent from their fuel budgets by converting to autogas.

The Joint Government Oil Industry Technical Working Group is led by the Department of Energy, in cooperation with the Department of Trade and Industry's Bureau of Product Standards and the Department of Interior and Local Government's Bureau of Fire Protection.

On the private sector side, participants include members of the Independent Philippine Petroleum Companies Association and the Philippine Petroleum Institute. Abiguil L. Ho

NCE AGAIN, it's the season of togas and diplomas, and a lot of serious celebratory partying.

Right after the graduation ceremonies, fresh grads and their family and friends often head out for dinner and drinks. Save yourself the trouble of going home to change clothes, and look for dressy but comfortable clothes that you can wear under your togas.

For girls lucky enough to not have restrictive dress codes (a few schools require their graduates to wear certain garments), the options

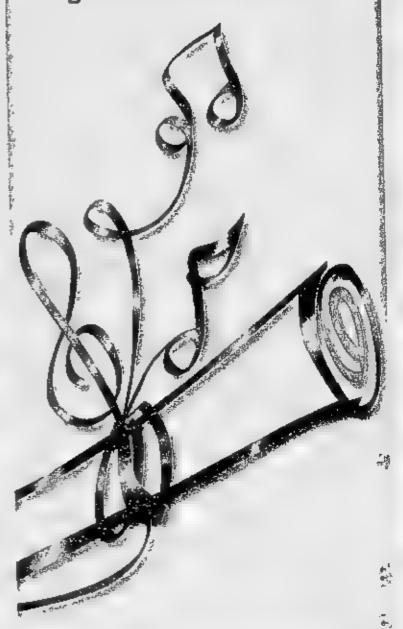

Try to pick dresses with steeves and lightweight fabrics in order to minimize sweating inside the hot, crowded auditoriums. Overly tight fabrics and too much lace will make you itch (you wouldn't want to keep squirming uncomfortably during the long speeches), so keep these to a minimum, too.

Again, comfort is key, so

AD EVERYTHING GONE according to plan, 1 would have graduated with a college diploma in 2004. By now, I would have a stable job, an ample amount of savings and a vast collection of very very beautiful shoes. Well, none of that happened (except for the shoes part). Believe it or not, my graduating two years late made everything so much better. In fact, it's the best thing that has ever happened to me.

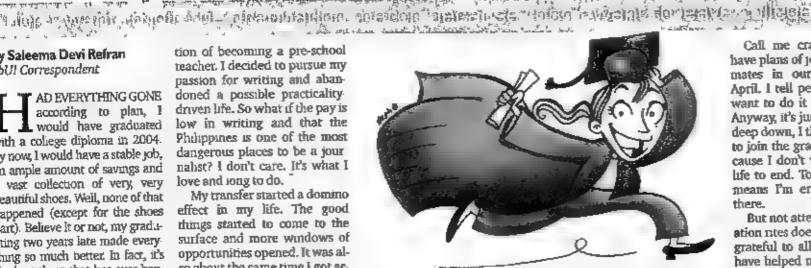

I have always believed that the choices we make define us and our futures. Transferring to another school was probably the best decision I've ever made in my whole life.

I transferred to the University of the Philippines two years into my Miriam College education of becoming a pre-school reacher. I decided to pursue my passion for writing and abandoned a possible practicality driven life. So what if the pay is low in writing and that the Philippines is one of the most dangerous places to be a jour nalist? I don't care. It's what I love and song to do.

My transfer started a domino effect in my life. The good things started to come to the surface and more windows of opportunities opened. It was also about the same time I got accepted as a 2bU! correspondent, a dream I had always had since I was in high school. For the first time ever, everything I could possibly want is but an arm's length away from me.

Being immersed into the UP system was also something. Imagine being in the midst of unbelievable personalities ev-calling for change and even or casional rock stars. Being taught by the movers and shakers of today's society leaves one wanting to make something of oneself as well.

I also got the chance to have ery day, actual people who are the most exciting classmates making a difference in the lives ever. Some were amazingly, inof Filipinos everyday, activists sanely smart, some amazing, some just plain insane. There were also plenty of sleepless nights, gazillion of zits and a couple of pounds added. It was a fun, fun ride. I never even noriced the years finally building up to graduation.

Call me crazy but I don't have plans of joining my batchmates in our graduation in April, I tell people I just don't want to do it or be part of it. Anyway, it's just pageantry. But deep down, I think I don't want to join the graduation rites because I don't want my college life to end. To attend the rites means I'm ending everything there.

But not attending the graduation ntes doesn't mean I'm not grateful to all the people who have helped me get to where i am right now. I will forever be thankful to my parents, family and Nanay for supporting me in all of my endeavors and believing in me no matter what. To my very first journalism teacher, Mrs. Antonia Corpuz, thank you for introducing me to the world of writing. To all of my friends, classmates and profes- s_a_l e e m_a@yahoo.com sors at the College of Mass Communication in UR thank you for teaching this soul about writing and everything about Looking back, I can't imagine how I would have turned out had I chickened out from transferring. I could have just settled for what was in front of me, like many others who shirk the idea of extending. People often ask me what I could've been had I chosen practicality over passion. I guess we'll never know.

Of my six-year stay in college, I learned a lot. I have more than enough friends to last me this lifetime and the next. Most of all, I have all the experience and knowledge I need to face the world head on. Not too bad for following one's heart, right?

HEN I FIRST GOT THE news that I flunked out of my first college, I was devastated, I couldn't remember any instance in my adolescent life that had made me cry as much as I did that day.

What hurt most? It was nearly everything. Going to a new school, not seeing my friends, and the realization that I had wasted two years of my life by goofing off in school.

It was only recently that I realized one more thing I wouldn't be seeing anytime soon. Graduation.

It feets more than a little strange. While I'm back to hitting the books, the people I grew up with are at job interviews, with some actually scared that they're going to end up as burns the day after they get their diplomas. A year ago, they were worried about what to get for their girlfnends' birthdays. A year ago, the arrival of the latest computer games seemed much more unportant than responses from potential employers. Tempus fugit, indeed.

Being asked Dude, so knilan kn gugraduate?" leaves me with a dumb look on my face, since I can't come up with a reply, I do not want to be known as the "old guy who hasn't graduated yet," but that is promically what I am.

Some of my new classmates haven't even had their debuts yet, for crying out loud! I get called knyn and po a million times a day, which doesn't make me feel any better about my age-I'm 22. I've tried lying about my age, but for some reason my beard and moustache being 17.

On a less shallow note, though, I do consider the considerable amount of time and money spent on subjects which will never be credited and to knowledge I'd never be able to use. Now that I've passed my "phase" (what my friends call that period where even the brightest student gets lazy and bums around), I can't belp but feel guilty about caring as little as I did.

A little more studying here, a bit more research there and maybe I'd be marching this month, too. But as the saying goes, it's no use crying over spilled milk.

New chapter

Thus begins the latest chapter in my life. Life goes on, right? I'm in a great love. I've gotten my confidence back, and am working harder than ever. Reality check: I'm graduating late, but from my perspective, I've gotten that second chance that everyone wishes they had

In my "old age," I've learned to look on the bright side of my predicament. If I didn't, I'd probably be insane, depressed, or both. For one thing, like some of my graduating friends have said, my not joining the work force yet is a bright side in itself I screwed up my first course (or two. okay, so there was a third too, but I didn't screw it up, I just didn't like it). But as I said, I love my new course and I'm moving in the right direction toward my dream.

On top of that, my experiences stop me from making the same mistakes I seem to cause doubt about my claims of new school, in a course I absolutely did as a young teen stud. (Okay, fine, I was a geek and always will be.) Oh, but the ladies like us mature guys, don't Senously, though, thinking about my situation and being a late graduate have only gotten me more focused. While the old me would just accept his loser-ly fate, the new me has risen to the challenges of my rebirth.

I've made myself a promise nor to sit around and sulk, and I intend to keep my word. If you have a similar story, why not do the same? Getting a degree bears burning around any day.

Let me end with one more cliché. What happens to us guys who got left behind? If at first we don't succeed, we dust ourselves off and try again. Story finished, but, more importantly, lesson

Accessories shouldn't be too loud, so wear simple necklaces and earrings that are suitable for the dignity of the occasion. In other words, that dog collar choker will not do, unless you want to make a major statement as the class rebel.

Clean and fresh

Makeup should also be kept clean and fresh during the ceremony. Smoky eyes and caked-on foundation aren't appropriate. Aside from running the risk of smearing your mascara and eye shadow if you start crying, the look required for smoky eyes (pale lips and barely there blush) might make you look washed out in your photos.

Start with the basics: a clean base, brightening eye shadow and liner, curled lashes and mascara, blush and lip gloss. Since you won't have too many opportunities to touch up during the ceremony, fix your makeup to make it last through all the photo ops after the commencement to the lash line as possible) and

Leave the glitter at home for the meantime, as you'll just look oily in your photos. A light matte foundation looks more polished and minimizes the need to touch

Stick to pastel or neutral shimmer for your eye area (avoid the heavily contoured purple/brown eye makeup, un less you want to be mistaken for your grandma) and don't forget to curi your lashes. Maybelline's Urban Orchid collection has pretty lilac and coral hues in its eye shadow palettes, perfect for a soft, feminine look.

Since graduation is a time for emotional moments, you can either skip the mascara or go with a waterproof one. Awake's roll curl mascara is perfect because it doesn't have bristles on its wand (and lets you get as close RADUATION GIFTS, IN general, should be for keeps. That's why jewelry is such a popular gift at this time of year. A piece of jewelry lasts forever, and its value often appreciates as the years go by.

Find the best place

wedding reception.

However, not everyone appreciates jewelry. Some would much rather have practical things.

Here are some gift options for your new graduate.

Laptop

if he/she doesn't have one yet, now might be the best time to get one. A laptop is perfect for making presentations to their scary new bosses once they start working, and it's even better if they're about to enter college, where term papers seem to have no end.

Summer trip

For many soon-tobe members of the rat race, the last summer before their entry into the working force is their last time to be wild and carefree. Reward them with a trip to a place they've always wanted to go to—Europe
if you have the bucks, an interesting trip around the country if you have a more modest budget. Travel is best experienced while young, so allow your fresh graduate to see the world with rose-colored glasses.

Scranbook

・公司の大学を提出しておりのできません。

This is a gift best given from one graduating friend to another. Compile photos of your favorite moments in school (don't forget to keep copies for yourself!) and arrange them in a scrapbook with other sentimental mementos, such as tickets and dried flowers. Sneak in a funny note or two, and scribble comments beside the photos to make the scrapbook more enjoyable.

Financial investments

While many young graduates might not appreciate "boring" things such as stocks and other financially related items, these are the gifts that actually matter, compared to the iPod that could get outdated in a few months. It's ensuring them of a sound future, after all Ask financial advisers for help. They can help determine what might be best for your young graduate.

Small practical items

If you're not that close to the graduate, or if you're saving money, get the person a practical item or two. This is especially applicable if he or she is going to dorm or live far away. Domestic stuff like steam frons, microwaves, tape recorders and rice cookers may get you a surprised look or two from the recipient, but they'll definitely end up using it more than a diamond-studded watch.

Jewelry

Still, nothing beats the appeal of a robin'segg-blue jewelry box from Tiffany's, so if you're sentimental and if the graduate likes, sparkling stuff, then by all means, jewelry's a good pick. Choose something that the recipient will wear, so don't impose your taste onhim or her Graduation is also a good time to pass on family heirlooms, so if you have any annous pieces to hand down, go for it.

Gifts are always given at the discretion of the giver However, graduation is always a good time to give presents that mean something and would amount to something useful or memorable, so choose well for your young

Hip-hop marvel

Hip-hop and R&B artist Kenneth "Kenphons" Serrano is a marvel to watch on the dance floor. The intensity of his, movements is breathraking. He bends like clay, twists like a tootsie roll, and maneuvers with strength and precision.

Kenshons says, "Dancing isn't just ahobby or pastime for me. Dancing is my life. I work hard to execute each step with perfect timing and artistry. Perfecting each routine means having a lot of faith and just feeling the beat of the music. Believe that you can do anything! And if you don't enjoy it, you re never going to be good at it."

Kenjhons began grooving at age 14; while growing up in Toronto, Canada Back in the Philippines, he joined the All Stars, a troop of hip-hop enthusiasts. All Stars placed sixth in the last World Hip-Hop Championships. The Levi's Engineered Jeans All Stars will again competent the upcoming World Hip Hop Championships in Los Angeles this year.

Zip whiz

Sharing Kenjhons' grace and fluidity in movement is zipping aficionado Lorraine, Lapuz.

For the ultra-athletic Jeena Lopez, climbing every mountain is not just a cliché, but a way of life.

To be honest, I'm afraid of heights. I'm claustrophobic as well," she says. Conquering these fears was Jeena's main motivation for getting into Pree Climbing. Now, apart from climbing, Jeena has also engaged in wreck and cave diving, sky diving, and

Since she started climbing in 1995, Jeena has conquered heights everywhere, scaling rock faces in Montalban, Rizal, all the way to Yosemite Park in California.

Unlike regular football, freestyle football can be played on the streets, with each team having three players each. Two road cones serve as goal posts. After his left leg crosses over the airborne ball, his right foot tries to kick the ball again before it hits the ground.
